County Board passes wheel tax, approves bond sale

By Erica Roth
COUNTY BOARD SUPERVISOR
Thank you for voting! The April 3rd election resulted in five new names on the Green County Board: District 3 (ward 3 in the City of Monroe) is now represented by Joe Snow, District 17 (wards 1 & 2 of Decatur Township) is now represented by John Winters, District 19 (wards 1 & 4 in the City of Brodhead) is now represented by Aaron Withee, District 26 (ward 1 in New Glarus Township and ward 4 in Exeter Township) is now represented by Jody Hoesly, and District 29 (wards 2 & 3 of Brooklyn Township) is now represented by Mark Gundlach. Welcome to the Board, new Supervisors!

The Organizational Meeting and County Board Meeting took place on April 17 at 7 p.m. in the County Board Room of the Historical Green County Courthouse in Monroe. The 2018 - 2020 Green County Board was sworn in and the Chair, First Vice-Chair, and Second Vice-Chair positions were elected. The Board elected Art Carter as the Chair, Dennis Everson as the First Vice-Chair, and Jerry Guth as the Second Vice-Chair. The meeting included the passing of a resolution that provides for the sale of $5,500,000 of building bonds. This is the last in the series of bonds to be passed for the new Government Services building. Several annual reports were presented, and there were fund transfers between various accounts and the general fund. The fund transfers were for over- and under-budgeting of departments; there was more over-budgeting than under-budgeting which resulted in more money being returned to the General Fund than transferred out.

An ordinance for an annual county vehicle registration fee passed with a vote of 29 - 1. This ordinance, 18-0403, can be found on the Green County website if you would like to read it. Vehicles, defined as automobiles or motor trucks of not more than 8,000 pounds, will be assessed a $20.00 county registration fee at the time of registration or registration renewal. The money collected from this registration fee will provide Green County Highway Department with a source of funds in addition to other funding sources currently being utilized. It is estimated that approximately $600,000 will be collected annually from this registration fee, with all of it (minus a nominal WisDOT administrative cost of $0.17 per vehicle) staying in Green County for the sole use by the Highway Department for Green County roads and bridges.

After County Highway Commissioner Chris Narvason's presentation a few months ago about the state of Green County's roads, it is clear that more funding is needed to keep our roads from falling into further disrepair; funding from the state and local levy is not adequate. Once our roads and bridges become unsafe and there are not funds to repair them, they will

Wheel tax passes: Kubly explains lone 'No' vote

By Ryan Broege
EDITOR

The County Board passed a wheel tax in the amount of $20 last Tuesday night, by a tally of 30-1. Every supervisor except for John Winters was present. Harvey Kubly of Monticello passed the lone dissenting vote. "That was primarily based on feedback I got from my constituents," said Kubly in an interview last week. "Nobody told me they wanted it."
Kubly said he was also concerned about the equitability of the tax being assigned to different vehicles.
"Of course my first job is to represent my constituents, and ... It wasn't an easy no, but to some degree I have to listen to my constituents," he said.
The tax will go into effect on August 1, 2018, to be included with vehicle registrations after that date. The tax has a sunset date of Dec. 31, 2023, which can be reviewed or extended by the board.

Going digital with math homework

By James Schwab
ALBANY HIGH SCHOOL MATH TEACHER

Throughout the past ten years, Albany School District has continually upgraded technology in order to help promote growth in 21st century skills and to increase efficiency and effectiveness of teaching. One of the newest ways student learning is being affected is through the use of digital online math homework for high school math classes.

The concept is simple to grasp, rather than completing homework with paper and pencil, students utilize electronic devices to complete and turn-in math assignments. Students sign-in to the website www.Bigideasmath.com where a multitude of resources exist in order to support learning and provide immediate feedback.

One of the main resources on the website is a homework portal where students can access classroom assignments from any device with an internet connection. The assignments can be custom designed by the instructor in order to differentiate to students with different needs and provides the instructor with classroom wide breakdowns of student progress on assignments.

Schwab, Albany High School's math teacher, said the online homework has made grading and analyzing homework fast and efficient. He is able to see exactly what students struggle with in a homework assignment and then adjust his classroom lesson accordingly.

In addition to the instructor benefits of the online homework, students have benefited from many of the homework resources as well. When students answer a question, they can instantly check their answer with a click of a button. If the answer is incorrect, the student may try again or can access a number of different supports from inside the homework assignment. These supports include: videos of worked out examples, electronic lessons from the textbook, interactive software for graphing, and live tutors during the evening hours.

Students also enjoy not having to take home a large math textbook (a dynamic e-textbook is another resource) as well as the freedom to turn-in assignments even if they are unable to make it into the school.

Albany School staff are involved with the new digital homework are confident the new medium for completing and analyzing homework will continue to improve the math achievement of Albany High School students.

Consider donating to BHS Post-Prom

On Saturday, May 5, 2018 many Brodhead High School students will be attending prom ~ "Paris at Night." The parents of the Brodhead High School Junior Class are in the process of organizing safe post-prom activities for the overnight hours following prom.

Our goal is to organize a fun, safe, and alcohol-free event. The committee, with input from students, has already decided on a venue for post-prom, Brodhead Middle School. Now our attention turns to entertainment and prizes to entice teenagers to join in the fun.

In order to host such an event, we need the support of area businesses so that we can make this an unforgettable evening for every BHS post-prom attendee.

Please consider making a monetary donation, a donation of a gift certificate for a product/service from your business, or a specific product. (Such donations are tax deductible.) To acknowledge your contribution, we will include your business's name in our follow-up article in the newspaper. Additionally, for those who donate $50 or more we will list your name on our event t-shirt.

Your generosity and support is needed and appreciated. If you have any questions or suggestions regarding BHS Post Prom, please contact Stephanie Tresemer at stresemer@brodhead.k12.wi.us.

Date set for 5th annual BPD Night Out

Mark your calendars - the Brodhead Police Association is happy to announce the date of their 5th Annual Night Out, which is set for Tuesday, August 21. (rain date is Wednesday, August 22) from from 5 to 9 p.m. at Jaycee Park, 300 4th St., Brodhead.

Wedding dresses: Styles vary with time, locations

A wedding dress or wedding gown is the clothing worn by a bride during a wedding ceremony. Color, style and ceremonial importance of the gown can depend on the religion and culture of the wedding participants.

In Western cultures, brides often choose white wedding dress, which was made popular by Queen Victoria in the 19th century. In eastern cultures, brides often choose red to symbolize auspiciousness.

Western culture

Weddings performed during and immediately following the Middle Ages were often more than just a union between two people. They could be a union between two families, two businesses or even two countries.

Many weddings were more a matter of politics than love, particularly among the nobility and the higher social classes. Brides were therefore expected to dress in a manner that cast their families in the most favorable light and befitted their social status, for they were not representing only themselves during the ceremony.

Brides from wealthy families often wore rich colors and exclusive fabrics. It was common to see them wearing bold colors and layers of furs, velvet and silk. Brides dressed in the height of current fashion, with the richest materials their families' money could buy. The poorest of brides wore their best church dress on their wedding day.

The amount and the price of material a wedding dress contained was a reflection of the bride's social standing and indicated the extent of the family's wealth to wedding guests.

The woman to the far right is wearing a typical wedding dress from 1929. Until the late 1960s, wedding dresses reflected the styles of the day. From that time onward, wedding dresses have often been based on Victorian styles.

The first documented instance of a princess who wore a white wedding gown for a royal wedding ceremony is that of Philippa of England, who wore a tunic with a cloak in white silk bordered with grey squirrel and ermine in 1406. Mary, Queen of Scots, wore a white wedding gown in 1559 when she married her first husband, Francis Dauphin of France, because it was her favorite color, although white was then the color of mourning for French Queens.

This was not a widespread trend, however: prior to the Victorian era, a bride was married in any color, black being especially popular in Scandinavia.

White became a popular option in 1840, after the marriage of Queen Victoria to Albert of Saxe-Coburg, when Victoria wore a white gown trimmed with Honiton lace. Illustrations of the wedding were widely published, and many brides opted for white in accordance with the Queen's choice.

Even after that, for a period, wedding dresses were adapted to the styles of the day. In the early 1900s, clothing included a lot of decorations, such as lace or frills. This was also adopted in wedding dresses, where decorative frills and lace was common.

For example, in the 1920s, they were typically short in the front with a longer train in the back and were worn with cloche-style wedding veils. This tendency to follow current fashions continued until the late 1960s, when it became popular to revert to long, full-skirted designs reminiscent of the Victorian era.

Today, Western wedding dresses are usually white, though "wedding white" includes shades such as eggshell, ecru and ivory.

Later, many people assumed that the color white was intended to symbolize virginity, though this was not the original intention: it was the color blue that was connected to purity, piety, faithfulness, and the Virgin Mary.

Current fashion

About 75 percent of wedding dresses on the market are strapless dresses or sleeveless, in part because such dresses require less skill from the designers and are easier to alter to fit correctly.[9] However, the sleeved wedding gown as well as wedding gowns with straps have both become more popular in recent years.

Eastern culture

Many wedding dresses in China, India (wedding sari), Pakistan (heavily embroidered shalwar qameez or lehngas) and Vietnam (in the traditional form of the Ao dai) are red, the traditional colour of good luck and auspiciousness. Nowadays, many women choose other colours besides red. In modern mainland Chinese weddings, the bride may opt for Western dresses of any colour, and later don a traditional costume for the official tea ceremony.

In modern Taiwanese weddings, the bride generally picks red (following Chinese tradition) or white (more Western) silk for the wedding gown material, but most will wear the red traditional garment for their formal wedding banquets.

Traditionally, the father of the bride is responsible for the wedding banquet hosted on the bride's side and the alcohol (specifically called "xi-jiu," confusingly the same as what the wedding banquet itself is called) consumed during both banquets.

While the wedding itself is often based on the couple's choices, the wedding banquets are a symbolic gesture of "thanks" and appreciation, to those that have raised the bride and groom (such as grandparents and uncles) and those who will continue to be there to help the bride and groom in the future. Thus out of respect for the elders, wedding banquets are usually done formally and traditionally.

Red wedding saris are the traditional garment choice for brides in Indian culture. Sari fabric is also traditionally silk. Over time, colour options and fabric choices for Indian brides have expanded.

Today fabrics like crepe, Georgette, charmeuse, and satin are used, and colors have been expanded to include gold, pink, orange, maroon, brown, and yellow as well. Indian brides in Western countries often wear the sari at the wedding ceremony and change into traditional Indian wear afterwards (lehnga, choli, etc.).

A Japanese wedding usually involves a traditional pure white kimono for the formal ceremony, symbolizing purity and maidenhood. The bride may change into a red kimono for the events after the ceremony for good luck.

The Javanese people of Indonesia wear a kebaya, a traditional kind of blouse, along with batik.

In the Philippines, variations of the Baro't saya adapted to the white wedding tradition are considered to be wedding attire for women, along with the Barong Tagalog for men. Various tribes and Muslim Filipinos don other forms of traditional dress during their respective ceremonies.

The indigenous peoples of the Americas have varying traditions related to weddings and thus wedding dresses. A Hopi bride traditionally had her garments woven by the groom and any men in the village who wished to participate.

The garments consisted of a large belt, two all-white wedding robes, a white wedding robe with red stripes at top and bottom, white buckskin leggings and moccasins, a string for tying the hair, and a reed mat in which to wrap the outfit. This outfit also served as a shroud, since these garments would be necessary for the trip through the underworld.

In the traditions of the Delaware, a bride wore a knee-length skirt of deerskin and a band of wampum beads around her forehead. Except for fine beads or shell necklaces, the body was bare from the waist up. If it was a winter wedding, she wore deerskin leggings and moccasins and a robe of turkey feathers. Her face was painted with white, red and yellow clay.

The tribes of Northern California (which include the Klamath, the Modoc and the Yurok) had a traditional bridal dress woven in symbolic colors: white for the east, blue for the south, yellow (orange) for the west; and black for the north. Turquoise and silver jewelry were worn by both the bride and the groom in addition to a silver concho belt. Jewelry was considered a shield against evils including hunger, poverty and bad luck.

Wedding rings: History dates back to ancient times

A wedding ring or wedding band is a finger ring that indicates that its wearer is married. It is usually forged from metal, and traditionally is forged of gold or another precious metal.

The earliest examples of wedding rings are from Ancient Egypt. Western customs for wedding rings can be traced to ancient Rome and Greece, and were transmitted to the present through Christendom in Europe, which adapted the ancient customs.

Depending on culture, a wedding ring is typically worn on the base of the left or right ring finger. Many spouses wear their wedding rings day and night, causing an indentation in the skin that is visible even when the ring is removed. Another indication of their cultural importance is that wedding rings are among the few items that prison inmates and visitors are permitted to wear.

History

It is commonly believed that the first examples of wedding rings were found in ancient Egypt. Relics dating to 6,000 years ago, including papyrus scrolls, are evidence of the exchange of braided rings of hemp or reeds between spouses.

Ancient Egypt considered the circle to be a symbol of eternity, and the ring served to signify the perpetual love of the spouses. This was also the origin of the custom of wearing the wedding ring on the ring finger of the left hand, because the ancient Egyptians believed that this finger enclosed a special vein that was connected directly to the heart, denominated in Latin the "Vena amoris".

The Western traditions of wedding rings can be traced to ancient Rome and Greece, and were first associated with the marital dowry and later with a promise of fidelity. The modern exchange of rings derived from the customs of Europe in the Middle Ages as part of Christendom.

In the United States, wedding rings were initially only worn by wives, but became customary for both husbands and wives during the 20th century.

Historical styles

Gimmel rings

During the 16th and 17th centuries, European husbands bestowed a gimmel ring upon their wives. Similar to the puzzle ring, the gimmel ring consisted of two interlocking bands. The bride and groom both wore one of these bands after their engagement, and the two bands were reunited during the wedding ceremony. Subsequently, the wife wore the combined ring.[5] that was popular during the Renaissance era. It was a band of sterling silver inscribed with a poem or "poesy".

Poesy rings

Other styles

Different cultures used many other historical styles of wedding ring. For example, see the image below of the Byzantine ring depicting Christ uniting bride and groom. Also, in the Middle East the puzzle ring was a historical custom: this ring consisted of several pieces that joined together into a cohesive band when worn properly.

The object of this style of ring was to render it very difficult to put on the finger properly such that, if the wife removed it, her husband would know. The fede ring, being a band consisting of two hands clasped in betrothal, is another historical custom of Europe that ostensibly dates from antiquity.

Limited gold content in the United Kingdom

In 1942 during the Second World War, British wartime restrictions on the manufacture of jewelry resulted in "utility" wedding rings that were limited to a maximum mass of two pennyweights, being slightly heavier than 3 grams, and were forged of 9 carat gold rather than the traditional 22 carat.

The Regional Assayer Office hallmarked these rings, which guaranteed their gold content and compliance with the wartime regulations with a special utility mark adjacent to the mark for the year on the inside of the band; the hallmark resembled a capital "U" with the bottom curve absent or two parentheses enclosing a space, i. e., "()".

Double-ring ceremony

The double-ring ceremony describes the exchange of wedding rings by and for both spouses. In several European nations such as the Nordic countries, it is common to exchange plain engagement rings of the same form for both sexes, and typically, an additional, more precious, and bejeweled wedding ring is given to the bride.

In the nuptials, the groom's ring becomes a wedding ring also, and can be bestowed anew by the bride as a part of the wedding ceremony. The engagement is commonly a matter of agreement between the two, and the wedding rings are chosen together.

Both engagement and wedding rings are worn on the left hand, the bride having both rings together. Occasionally, the groom receives a separate wedding ring. In Germany and Austria, both parties use engagement rings worn on the left hand. At the nuptials, a wedding ring is placed on the right hand, as in several east European nations, including Bulgaria, Poland, and Russia.

This can be a new ring for the bride or both, or reusing the engagement rings. Any engagement rings can then remain on the left hand or be transferred to the right hand. In Germany, it has been customary for both the bride and the groom to wear a wedding ring since at least the 1870s and mentions of couples exchange rings during the wedding ceremony in the Netherlands can be found at least as far back as 1815.

In Brazil, Mexico and Spain both sexes also wear engagement rings, and the groom's ring often becomes a wedding ring in the nuptial exchange ceremony. In The Netherlands plain bands can be worn on either hand, left for Catholics and right for Protestants. When engaged, both bride and groom wear what will be the wedding band on the opposite hand and switch hands after the wedding.

Compositions and styles

In Western nations, wedding rings are often forged of rose, white, or yellow gold; palladium, platinum, argentine silver, or, more recently, silicone. The perpetuity of noble metals symbolizes the permanence of the marriage.

Common engravings on the inside of the ring include the name of one's spouse, the names of both spouses, the date of the wedding, and/or a phrase of significance to the spouses. In many nations the engagement rings are plain while the bride's wedding ring commonly is bejeweled.

Some customs include the wedding ring as the final of a series of gifts, which also may include the engagement ring, traditionally given as a betrothal present. This custom was practiced in ancient Rome and is possibly much older.

Religion

Wedding ceremony customs

A groom placing a wedding ring on the finger of his bride during a wedding ceremony

In several traditions, the best man or maid of honour has the duty of keeping track of a couple's wedding rings and to produce them at the symbolic moment of the giving and receiving of the rings during the traditional marriage ceremony.

In more elaborate weddings, a ring bearer (who is often part of the family of the bride or groom) may assist in the ceremonial parading of the rings into the ceremony, sometimes on a special cushion.

Among Eastern Orthodox and Eastern Catholic Christians, the exchange of rings is not technically part of the wedding service, but rather are exchanged at the betrothal. It is always a two-ring set given to her by the priest or by the best man.

The orthodox Christian Church of Greece has recently stopped performing betrothal blessings separately, as these were often non-committing, and now a betrothal ceremony is the initial part of the wedding service.

In many families an informal blessing is now performed by the betrothed ones' parents in a family dinner that formalizes the betrothal. The ceremony of betrothal is now possibly performed immediately before the wedding (or "crowning" as it is more properly called), and the actual symbolic act of marriage is not the exchange of rings, but the crowning.

Historically, the wedding ring was connected to the exchange of valuables at the moment of the wedding rather than a symbol of eternal love and devotion, a sign of "earnest money." According to the 1549 edition of the Book of Common Prayer: after the words 'with this ring I thee wed' follow the words 'This gold and silver I give thee', at which point the groom was supposed to hand a leather purse filled with gold and silver coins to the bride.[15] It is a relic of the times when marriage was a contract between families, not individual lovers.

Both families were then eager to ensure the economic safety of the young couple. Sometimes it went as far as being a conditional exchange as this old (and today outdated) German formula shows: 'I give you this ring as a sign of the marriage which has been promised between us, provided your father gives with you a marriage portion of 1000 Reichsthalers'.

Northwest Illinois prairie enthusiasts get fired up for Spring

By John Day
CORRESPONDENT

As they do each spring and autumn, members of the Northwest Illinois Prairie Enthusiasts, also known as NIPE, begin conducting prescribed burns on wild lands across this corner of the state. NIPE is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to preserve the Illinois tall grass prairie. NIPE has worked to establish protected prairie sites of their own as well as working with other conservation organizations and private landowners.

The prairie is a fire dependent ecosystem. Without regularly prescribed burns being done the prairie begins to die off while undesirable weeds begin to thrive. In modern times, there is also an issue with invasive species taking root and becoming the dominant form of plant life. In order to keep the prairies thriving and healthy prescribed burns are done on sites at least once within five years.

Recently, a 20-acre burn was done at Hanley – Savanna Prairie, west of Hanover and a 30 acre burn at Lone Tree Farm south of Stockton.

All of the fire crews doing the Northwest Illinois Prairie Enthusiasts and JDCF members Pam Richards, Jim Richards, and John Arndt ignite a first fire line which quickly expands to engulf a major portion of the prairie area targeted last weekend for a controlled burn.

prescribed burns are volunteers. Ed Strenski, Land Manager for NIPE is the Burn Boss on these projects and like many of the volunteers, Strenski has been certified by the Illinois Fire Service Institute. Strenski said, "NIPE is one of the members of a burn co-op. Several organizations team up to enlist volunteers, provide training and equipment and do prescribed burns in a manner that is professional and safe. Safe for all of our volunteers and safe for all of the neighbors."

There are a number of factors that have to be taken into consideration before large areas of land can be set on fire. Safety is of course a primary concern. Additionally, in order to ensure that the burning will have the desired effect on a prairie, there are special considerations. Strenski said, "There's considerable planning and strategy that goes into a prescribed burn before open flame is put down on the ground.

Weather, wind, terrain, the burn history of a property and the reason for the burn all have to be taken into account when planning an event.

"For instance, strong winds coming from a certain direction that may cause us to believe a fire isn't advisable in one location could be an asset on a different property. There are also the materials on the landscape that will burn. If the prairie doesn't have enough dry plant matter, fire will just not work. Humidity can also inhibit the performance of the fire. High humidity will dampen the driest field enough to prevent the fire from accelerating.

"Hollow trees, old logs along with any number of hazards represent safety concerns. Smoke can swirl from one direction in thick clouds only to turn and come back at you. In the end though, the prescribed burns are necessary to promote the health of the prairies. When the fire is done and the stretch of land is blackened, it's exciting to come back in a week and see the green shoots rising from the ashes."

100 Women Who Care make record donation to Gaited Journeys Equine Congratulations to Gaited Journeys Equine assisted therapy for being the recipient of the February Quarterly donations! This organization, located in Rock City, uses horses to facilitate healing, self-discovery, inner growth, confidence and respect within the individuals interacting with them. Gaited Journeys, run by Donna and Randy Macklin has 19 horses on the farm and those horses are consistently used to assist veterans and their families working through PTSD issues. They also serve girls at NCS Youth Home and help area students resolve trauma caused by physical, emotional and sexual injury, anxiety and more. The individuals and families all work to develop a relationship with the horses and in turn hone their communication skills, build trust, release anger in a positive manner and develop a strong sense of self-worth and confidence.

Donations from 100 Women Who Care members total $13,950 for Gaited Journeys. This is a new record-high donation from the chapter to a local non-profit organization. What a great way to celebrate our third year anniversary.

Money from the donations will be used to provide equine-assisted therapy to at-risk teens. This will be accomplished not only by direct therapy with the individuals but also through the purchase of updated supplies such as saddles and helmets. Additional training/certification in equine-assisted therapy through a five-day course will be utilized and basic supplies for the horses will be purchased with the funds.

Save the date: Wisconsin Farm to Table dinner event in Darlington

Wisconsin Farm to Table is excited to announce the date and location of the fifth annual Farm to Table dinner and fundraiser. Scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 4, the elegant dinner will be hosted at Darlington Ridge Farms, a dairy situated among the lush fields of southwest Wisconsin.

This memorable dining experience is designed to bring consumers and farmers together to explore the world of agriculture - focusing on animal care, environmental practices, and the safe and pure food products consumed at family dinner tables throughout the year. Wisconsin agriculture will be discovered through a unique on-farm culinary experience. Guests may explore the taste of Wisconsin's agricultural diversity from prestigious cheeses, wines, meats, vegetables, and beyond.

The evening's creations will be prepared and presented by local chef and self-proclaimed farm kid, Tyler Sailsbery. Chef Sailsbery is the head chef and owner of The Black Sheep in Whitewater, Wis., where he works with local farmers to craft unique dishes, packed with fresh ingredients and divine flavors. Chef Tyler also works as the executive chef and general manager for Fin & Hooves, inside the Whitewater Country Club, which offers a casual and fun atmosphere.

Darlington Ridge Farms, LLC, located at 24425 St. Peters Road, Darlington, Wis., is a labor of love for managing partners Jim and Katie DiGangi. Hailing from New York state, Jim is a third-generation farmer who grew up on his family's 40-cow dairy farm.

After earning his bachelor's degree and gathering farm management experience in Idaho and California, he headed to the Midwest and Darlington Ridge Farms, LLC was established in 2008. Katie is a sixth-generation farmer who grew up on her family's dairy farm in Southwest Wisconsin.

She works off the farm helping local dairy producers and veterinarians to produce a safe and nutritious food supply and has a passion for cow comfort and health with Zoetis. While raising their daughter Mila to love the farm, the DiGangi's work alongside their employees to keep the 2,600 Holstein dairy cows and the land well cared for. The milk from their farm is shipped through DFA (Dairy Farmers of America), and is crafted in various delectable dairy products at local milk and cheese plants.

"We're excited to share a glimpse of the life we get to enjoy daily while offering consumers greater perspective of where their food comes from," says Katie DiGangi.

"We hope the event will provide an opportunity for attendees to connect with our farm and the local farms supplying the ingredients while learning about the stewardship practices of all the farms," shares Jim DiGangi.

The fifth-annual Farm to Table dinner will incorporate a farm tour at 5 p.m., followed by a cocktail hour and live music entertainment at 6 p.m., and conclude with a catered dinner complimented by a supplier stories program at 7 p.m.

To secure dinner tickets and for more information, visit www.wifarmtotable.com, call event contact, Kari Kuehl, at 262-203-4016, or email wifarmtotable@gmail.com. The event is open to the public and specifically influential people in the surrounding region that are interested in learning more about agriculture and where their food originates. The event is limited to the first 100 guests. Those interested are encouraged to purchase tickets early.

Wisconsin Farm to Table is a non-profit event organization established in 2013 to offer an on-farm experience, with a farm tour, elegant dinner, and dialogue between those interested in agriculture and where their food originates. Money raised from annual event is donated to a local non-for-profit of the host farm's choice.

For hunters spring means turkey season

Approximately 80,000 hunters will be heading to the field for the 2018 spring turkey hunting season, which began with the first period on April 18.

Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources Conservation Warden and Hunter Education Administrator Jon King says there are two key factors needed for safe turkey hunting.

“The two most critical ingredients for a successful spring hunt are a detailed hunting plan in one hand and a firm grip on firearm safety in the other,” King said.

DNR statistics show 80 percent of accidents during turkey hunting seasons involve hunters mistaking other hunters for game, or hunters failing to positively identify their target. The other 20 percent of accidents are self-inflicted, usually the result of violating one of the four firearm safety rules.

“Turkey hunters, like all hunters, must practice these four basic safety guidelines when handling their firearms,” King said. “Treat every firearm as if it is loaded, always point the muzzle in a safe direction, be sure of your target and what’s beyond it, and keep your finger outside of the trigger guard until ready to shoot.”

It’s a good idea to wear a blaze orange cap or gloves while walking. And find a hunting spot that allows you to rest your back against a tree or some other object that is as wide as your shoulders. This helps protect you from not only an errant shot, but from the good vision of the turkey.

Never stalk a wild turkey and don’t try to approach closer than 100 yards to a gobbler. The chances of getting close enough for a shot are slim, but the chances of becoming involved in an accident are increased. The less you move the safer and more effective you will be in field.

Follow these simple rules for a safe and successful hunt.

- Identify your target; it’s not a good enough reason to take a shot when a hunter only thinks they are seeing a legal target.

- Do not shoot at sound and movement.
- Be certain of your target, what’s in front of it and beyond it.

• Avoid wearing red, white and blue. These colors are also shared by gobblers.

- Use gobble calls only to locate a tom, not to attract one. Some other hunter might think you’re a turkey.
- Keep hands and head camouflaged when calling.

- Never carry or move an uncovered decoy.

“Continuing Wisconsin’s safe hunting tradition is a shared responsibility of all hunters,” King said.

Brodhead Community Gardens plots available

Interested in growing your own food? Do you have limited or no access for a garden where you live? Would you like to have fresh beans in July, tomatoes in August and butternut squash for dinner in October? Then you are a candidate to join the Brodhead Community Gardens. There will be an acre of land available behind Brodhead Farm and Home for community residents to have their own garden plot to grow what they wish.

The spaces are approximately 20x25, or roughly 300 square feet. You may reserve up to four sections per family and you may keep your same plot year after year. Participants are asked to use limited amounts of fertilizer, use organic herbicides and pesticides, and clean up their space by Nov. 1. All vegetables are the property of the grower, and the garden will be open 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. (daylight hours) during the summer months for planting, weeding and harvesting. If you have never had a garden before, experienced gardeners will be available to help you get started. There will be water available on site. The cost of a plot for the 2018 growing season is $10, with a $10 charge for garden clean up. There will be a Community Gardens Growers meeting on Saturday, April 28 at 9 a.m. in the Community Room at the Brodhead Memorial Public Library. We will be making plans for the coming year and work on securing a shed for storage. Weather permitting, we will be cleaning up the compost pile and taking the plant material to the dump. Please bring along garden tools and a pick-up truck if you have one.

We may be a little late this year because of the cool weather and deep frost. Please do not start your garden until the whole area is tilled. We will do this as soon as soil conditions allow. For more information, you may contact Tiff Bates at 608-897-3728.

Please be advised of the following requirements to appear before the board of review and procedural requirements if appearing before the board:

1. No person will be allowed to appear before the board of review, to testify to the board by telephone, or to contest the amount of any assessment of real or personal property if the person has refused a reasonable written request by certified mail of the assessor to enter onto property to conduct an exterior view of such property being assessed.

CHARLES MCMANUS

Charles Edward McManus, of Evansville, WI, formerly of Brodhead, passed away on Tuesday, April 17, 2018, at The Heights Assisted Living, Evansville, WI. He was born on February 9, 1926 in Sesser, IL, the son of Philip and Gertrude (Davis) McManus.

During World War II, Charles enlisted in the Marines and served in the Pacific Theatre, including the Liberation of the Philippines. After the war he studied political science and educational psychology at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, and there he met Nora Kreher, whom he married in 1949. After graduating from SIU he began his career in coal and later oil and gasoline sales, a career that took him and his family from Illinois, to Iowa, Missouri, California, and finally Wisconsin. In 1966 he bought Ties Oil Company, later named McManus Oil Company, in Brodhead, which he and Nora owned and operated until their retirement in 1992. Charles was a leader and innovator in the oil and heating business, served as President of the Wisconsin Oil Jobbers Association, and was one of the first dealers in the nation to offer customers 24-hour, self-service gasoline through a card-swipe operation. He was a member of the Swann-Gehr American Legion Post #197, served as Commander of the post three times, and was a member of St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church of Brodhead.
