Primary next week will likely decide Walker's opponent in fall

Green and Rock county voters will go to the polls next Tuesday, Aug. 14, in Wisconsin's 2018 partisan primary.

Their vote will decide whose names appear on the general election ballot Nov. 6.

Next week's vote will decide final candidates for governor, U.S. Senate, US. Representative, odd-numbered Wisconsin State Senate Districts, all Wisconsin Assembly Districts and county contests.

Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. My Vote Wisconsin website has a search engine for polling place addresses. All voters must show a photo ID when they go to those polling places.

For Democrats in Wisconsin, the primary race to select a candidate to win back the governor's post still has a crowded field.

Here are profiles of seven candidates who debated each other recently in Monroe and who are still seeking their party's primary backing to face Gov. Walker Nov. 6.

Kathleen Vinehout

State Sen. Kathleen Vinehout, 59, followed her dream 25 years ago when she started her own dairy farm in rural Buffalo County, milking 50 cows in an tie stalls. The farm is now certified organic and produces hay and grain.

She came into politics late. In 2006, she ran for State Senate and beat a popular Republican incumbent in a mostly rural district. She has been re-elected twice.

In the Senate, she has worked to make health care affordable, bring more equity to school funding, and find alternatives to incarceration. As a member of the audit committee, she has overseen the evaluation of state programs and has sought to make the state run more efficiently. In each of the last four budget cycles, she has written alternative budgets that reflect different choices she would have made with the money available.

Some of these choices include making all technical colleges and 2-year UW campuses free for Wisconsin residents, expanding Badgercare to cover 79,000 more people, restoring funds to the university system, and adding $100 million to fund broadband across the state.

Before entering politics, Kathleen taught in and directed the Health Service Administration program at the University of Illinois at Springfield. Before that, she directed the education department at the Visiting Nurses Association in St. Louis. She has graduate degrees in Health Services Research and Public Health and an associate's in agriculture.

Today, Kathleen still lives on her farm with her husband, Doug, and son Nathan. In her spare time, she enjoys her two horses: Vana and Rosie and her cat, Rustle.

pay his way. Flynn's father Gerard old red barn with taught at UW-Milwaukee for many years. After the children were grown,

Flynn's mother Geraldine worked in the Post Office. Matt and Mary Flynn have been married 41 years. Mary is originally from Monroe and worked for many years as a speech pathologist in the Germantown Public Schools. After college, Flynn joined the Navy. He attended law school at UW-Madison and began his legal career in > Milwaukee. Under his leadership, the party retired its debt, elected a Democratic Governor, and took majorities in both houses of the State Legislature.

Matt has helped many Democratic candidates get elected. He has been a strong voice in shaping public policy in Wisconsin.

Kelda Roys

Kelda Roys, 38, is a small business owner, former state representative, attorney, and advocate for women. A mom and stepmom of 4 girls, Kelda is relentlessly focused on building a Wisconsin where everyone has the chance to succeed.

Kelda Roys

Born in Marshfield and raised in Medford and Madison, Kelda loves Wisconsin.

Her mother was a social worker and inspired her passion for public service. Her stepdad was an environmental lawyer from Portage, and her father, a retired prosecutor and law enforcement officer who lives in Wauwatosa.

Kelda is the CEO and Founder of OpenHomes, a real estate brokerage that uses technology to help people sell and buy homes more easily and affordably. Frustrated with the high fees and inconsistent service of traditional brokerages, Kelda created an innovative, low-cost real estate brokerage while pregnant with her first child. Kelda's growing company has created good paying jobs for Wisconsinites and serves customers in 41 counties across Wisconsin. As an employer and entrepreneur, Kelda understands how to create jobs, and she knows the importance of small businesses to a vibrant, growing economy.

She has also served on many boards including the ACLU of Wisconsin, TEMPO Madison, Common Cause, Wisconsin Women's Council, Citizen Action of Wisconsin. Roys represented the 81st

Assembly District from her election in 2008 until 2013, and during the 2011-2013 session, served as Minority Caucus Chair. In September 2011, Roys ran for Congress in Wisconsin's 2nd congressional district, a race she lost in August 2012. She left the Assembly when her second term ended in 2013. Paul Soglin

Paul Soglin is the longest serving mayor in Madison's history. He has been Madison's Mayor for more than 20 years, spanning four decades.

Mayor Soglin

Paul Soglin has always been that rare elected leader unafraid to do what's right -- breaking ground by hiring more women and people of color; raising the minimum wage; creating record numbers of senior, affordable and low-income housing; standing with Sen. Gaylord Nelson on the first Earth Day; getting large public projects built.

Paul Soglin enrolled at UW-Madison in 1962 as a pre-med student. He graduated in 1966 with honors in history and then spent 3 years in the UW History graduate program, before obtaining his law degree from the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1972.

His lifelong dedication to social justice, equal rights, and making government responsive to the people it serves, began early. While in high school, in the spring of 1959, he joined in "sympathetic boycotts" at the Woolworth store in downtown Chicago.

He was elected to Madison's Common Council in 1968. He was re-elected in 1970 and 1972.

He was first elected Mayor of Madison in 1973. Elected twice more in the 1970's, Soglin served as Madison's mayor until 1979. From 1979 to 1980, Soglin was a fellow at the Kennedy School of Governmentat Harvard University. After working for nearly a decade as a lawyer in Madison, Soglin returned to elected office in 1989, serving three additional terms as Madison mayor until 1997.

He resigned as Mayor in 1996 when taking on the challenge of running against Republican congressman Scott Klug. For the next 15 years, Paul worked in the private sector as a financial advisor at Lincoln Financial; as the administrator at Epic Systems, leading the phased move of Epic's 2,600 employees to its new corporate campus, overseeing its $23 million investment program and helping develop Epic's charitablegiving program; and serving as a consultant. He also taught at the LaFollette School of Public Affairs, leading graduate seminars in public finance, public management, and public personnel practices.

Wisconsin Small Community Forum set Aug. 22 in New Glarus

Small communities have unique issues and needs often very different from those of larger communities.

To address these needs, regional forums have been designed to bring together people involved and interested in promoting, enhancing and preserving Wisconsin's small communities.

If you live in, work in, or help shape communities with populations of 2,500 or fewer, attend a session that has been scheduled near you.

You'll learn through case studies, roundtables and discussion groups how you may be able to better address your community's unique needs.

Come with examples of local and regional success stories. Bring along your small community's challenges, and be prepared to share with and learn from colleagues and friends.

Everyone in the community and region is invited.

An optional, free Community Conversation on Inclusivity will be held 11 a.m. to noon, led by the Wisconsin Institute for Public Policy and Service in partnership with the League of Wisconsin Municipalities and the Wisconsin Counties Association.

The purpose of this public dialogue series is to engage business, non-profit, government, and other community leaders in both urban and rural settings. It is to help them discuss how and what communities are doing to attract and retain talent, create welcoming and vibrant communities, encourage a healthy environment for young people, and improve access and affordability of health care for local residents.

There is no charge for this conversation, and attendance is optional.

Especially invited are community leaders, elected officials, volunteers, business leaders, educators, and both local and regional economic development, civic, and planning.

In Green County, the Small Community Forum is scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 22, at the New Glarus Hotel Restaurant, 100 6th Ave.

Registration is $20 and includes lunch. Register at https://www. eventbrite.com/e/new-glarussmall-community-forum-tickets-46370676943?ref=ebtn or by downloading a registration form. Mahlon followed in his older brother's footsteps when he became a fire fighter in Madison twenty years ago. His two brothers are fire fighters in Atlanta and St. Paul. These careers came out of a family that instilled values of service and working for others

Mahlon was a counselor at the Wisconsin Alliance for Fire Safety's Burn Camp, which he also directed for five years. This summer camp worked with burn-injured youth. He also worked as a street outreach coordinator with Briarpatch and Youth Services of Southern Wisconsin, where he linked at-risk youth with community services.

When the fight over collective bargaining and Scott Walker's Act 10 law began in 2011, Mahlon led the fire fighters in a monumental stand of solidarity with other public servants. Despite being exempted from the bill, Mahlon and his fellow fire fighters marched on the Capitol with fellow working families that were threatened by the Budget Repair Bill.

Mahlon took the opportunity to travel the state as a fire fighter spreading the word about Scott Walker's divisive policies. Mahlon ran for Lieutenant Governor as the Democratic nominee in the 2012 recall election.

Before the Democracy Campaign, the only way to see who was donating to elected officials and candidates for office was to travel to the old state Elections Board in Madison and personally examine mountains of paper reports.

The Democracy Campaign entered all of the information on those reports into an electronic database and published it online, making it vastly easier to follow the money in Wisconsin politics. For its efforts under Mike's leadership, the Democracy Campaign was named the Citizen Openness Advocate of the Year in 2012 by the Wisconsin Freedom of Information Council and the state Society of Professional Journalists.

From 1984 to 1988 he was superintendent of the Oakfield school district, and from 1988 to 1992 he was superintendent of the Verona school district. From 1992 to 2001 he was administrator of Cooperative Education Service Agency in Oshkosh.

Evers ran for superintendent in 2009, defeating Rose Fernandez in the general election. In 2013, Evers defeated Don Pridemore and won reelection. In 2017, Evers defeated Republican-backed candidate Lowell Holtz, a former Beloit superintendent, winning approximately 70 percent of the vote.

For several state budget cycles, Evers has proposed the "Fair Funding for Our Future" school finance reform plan. The plan seeks to address challenges with the school funding system and proposes changes to ensure equity and transparency in the quality of our schools. Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker has never included Evers' plan in his proposed state budget, citing the cost

Giving voice to little changes adds up to big hopes

By Tony Ends EDITOR

Why do citizens of Earth's most powerful democracy feel powerless? Do they fear big forces are out of control? Does this make them feel they can't make a difference, so why bother?

Rare citizens among us today make time to attend meetings, dig into issues, raise their voices to elected and appointed officials. These few buck any sense of powerlessness that may keep so many others from positively engaging.

Oddly enough, even they some times confess they're discouraged. What makes them tick? Why do they keep going?

"I think a lot of people think they can't make a difference," said Bethany Edmon Storm, who has been actively attending town, county and state meetings as a Wisconsin resident, parent and concerned citizen.

"I think even a lot of people in office locally don't think they can make a difference, that their hands are often tied," Storm said in a recent interview. "I have left a lot of meetings over the past 3 years feeling the same way, but there are all these little changes that have taken place that give you hope.'

Storm and her husband Tim finished building and moved into a home they built on a Town of York property in 2013. Green County residents from Brodhead to Monroe, however, now know Storm in less than 5 years as well as they do 5th generation locals.

Positive changes, of which Storm has played a part – in a very short time, despite personal sacrifices hardly seem little. In Green County, they've been adding up and up in big ways.

Vitally, they affect water we drink, resources we can't live without. They even affect whether and how we might keep a flock of chickens out in the country.

For Storm, speaking up for change has sprung repeatedly from a central concern for health and safety of her children, of neighbors.

When Green County Land Use and Zoning Committee as a matter of past practice refused public comment at its meetings a few months ago, Storm approached each committee member afterward. She asked them individually to please consider changing that rule, please let common citizens have a few minutes to speak.

Just two meetings later, after the committee put the request on the agenda, then voted to allow public comment before each meeting, Storm was there with others to voice concerns, to ask for help. In fact, more than 20 people came before the committee the first time allowed to speak. There were multiple concerns.

More than half those present in that first meeting allowing public comment, pleaded with their elected county supervisors, for help ad- In response to repeated requests dressing automatic weapons' use on a neighbor's land. That neighbor's land is on Alpine Road near Brooklyn. Area residents described it as a shooting range.

They told Green Land Use and Zoning committee rapid-fire shooting of machine guns into a mound of dirt on the property can run all day long. They said groups of people, sometimes even in the property owner's absence, sometimes with out-of-state license plates, fire those military style weapons.

Another citizen came before the committee with a petition of more than 30 neighbors in Brodhead. She asked the committee to help curb an excavator's heavy machinery and equipment noise. The noise runs beyond hours the excavator described in a conditional use permit application to Green County.

Storm was there before Green County Land Use and Zoning Committee to support another parent and friend, Kristie Pulvemacher, from the Town of New Glarus. Pulvemacher's children attend the same schools as the Storms' two girls.

Green County officials had stopped Pulvemacher from enlarging a chicken coop. They had told her even the original coop was too close to neighbors. Pulvemacher's subsequent request for a setback variance was denied.

Pulvemacher thus asked the Land Use and Zoning Committee to shorten the buildable distance for a chicken coop from a lot line in county ordinances. For rural residences on land under six acres, Green County requires 100-foot setbacks for greenhouses or structures housing livestock or poultry.

Storm and half-a-dozen others at the meeting supported Pulvemach-

This month, the full county board of supervisors will take up Land Use and Zoning committee's recommendation to shorten the distance in the ordinance to 50 feet. This favorable response for a little change is just one in a series of much bigger initiatives Storm helped shepherd.

-State lawmakers stripped towns and counties in 2004 of the right to refuse permits to huge livestock operations -except where health and safety is proven scientifically to be imperiled. A biologist, Storm served on a Town of Sylvester task force of volunteer scientists who produced a 124-page health and safety study in little more than 6 months.

-A huge, expanding industrial dairy operation based in Nebraska began trying to site yet a 4th concentrated animal feeding operation near Brodhead in 2015. Because Green County never had its own hydro geological mapping study, they used state mapping from over in Janesville and elsewhere to meet state permit requirements.

of Storm and others in meetings, Green County Board of Supervisors found, hired and paid TRC to conduct hydro geologic mapping of its landscape, soils, geological features.

-Storm's Town of York reactivated its Land Conservation Committee and appointed Storm and four others to it. They spent 2 years creating their town's own ordinances within state requirements - to protect residents' health and safety. Now Storm has been named to York's planning commission.

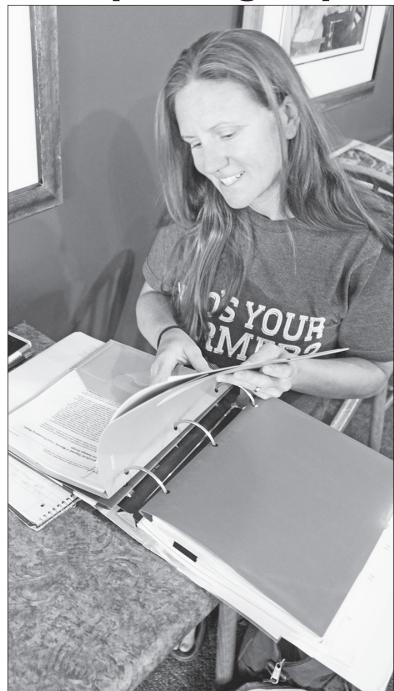

-Green County named Storm to a livestock facilities study committee, which in 6 months produced extensive recommendations for improvements and protections. County board committees and conservation, highway, law enforcement, public health and zoning staff are all now studying during a moratorium on CAFOs to protect health and safety moving forward.

"We're trying to make sure the recommendations were not made for nothing," Storm said of her persistent attendance at meetings. 'that they're taken seriously. This is the point of it all, to keep our water clean, our communities safe."

Thoughtful solutions, positive contributions, come from hard work in public service – not merely showing up to complain. For now, Bethany and Tim Storm are grateful at least one of them can spend up to 20 hours a week doing that.

Storm has "dragged" her daughters along to many meetings to make sure they see what a citizen must do, to make sure they hear her voice. She's not trying to impress them, or even to hide when she's afraid, or unsure, or feels powerless

Maybe that's the cure Americans who don't exercise their freedoms to speak, vote, serve on committees, contribute solutions need. 'You have a real voice," Storm tells her kids, "and you should use it."

Some 600 bicyclists from 23 states and Canada are expected for the 4th annual one-day, 175-mile ride, which starts in Dubuque and finishes in Kenosha.

The Ride Across Wisconsin (RAW) is the signature event for the Bicycle Federation of Wisconsin, a state-based advocacy group.

"We're absolutely thrilled to have RAW coming through Beloit again, giving us a chance to show off our city and beauty of the Rock leaders from Beloit Memorial High Beloit will again play a major River," said Rick Barder, Rest Stop Coordinator.

> "This has become one of our most exciting events of the summer.

> The Rock Bar & Grill will provide lunch for the very hungry bicyclists as they stop in Beloit at the 105mile mark before they embark on the last 70 miles to Kenosha. Bicyclists will be arriving in Beloit between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m.

> More than 50 local volunteers will assist riders through the city streets and bike paths leading into and exiting Beloit. Entertainment at the Rest Stop will include Cheer-

School, the Even Start Hispanic Dancers, the Strike Force Gospel Singers and a Bag Piper.

'It wouldn't be possible to stage this event without the incredible assistance of our volunteer network and local representatives," said Bike Federation executive director Dave Schlabowske. "Beloit has been a great partner for us and we're thankful for its continued support."

RAW is not a race but rather a challenging bike ride with professional support and numerous, wellstocked rest stops. There is no timing, and there are no prizes, aside from bragging rights and a souvenir beer goblet at the finish line party on the shores of Lake Michigan.

The ride starts at dawn on the downtown streets of Dubuque,

Steel Roofing Siding Direct from Manufacturer to You

- crosses the Mississippi River and climbs through the hills of south-west Wisconsin's "Driftless Area" before flattening out in the second half.

One of the big attractions of RAW is getting a chance to meet and ride with Jens Voigt, a 17-time Tour de France racer and Sven Nys, two-time World Champion cyclocross racer.

Both raced for Trek during their professional careers. Trek Bicycle Corp. of Wisconsin is a major supporter of RAW and the Wisconsin Bike Federation.

Profits from RAW help the Bike Federation continue to teach bicycle safety education across the state and for 4-H groups who volunteer at rest stops along the route.

Rock official moving courts into electronic age

Rock County Clerk of Circuit Court Jacki Gackstatter took on in her first term heading up the office in 2014 the biggest chore of 15 years she's served in the department.

At the same time she's managed all the circuit court records, accounted for millions of dollars of court fines, fees and forfeitures and managed the jury process, she's had to move the system along gradually into the electronic era.

Here she responds to The Independent-Register's request she describe that process.

By Jacki Gackstatter ROCK CIRCUIT COURT CLERK

Wisconsin Supreme Court created Wis. Stat. § 801.18, which establishes procedures for court documents to be filed electronically.

eFiling is a more convenient and efficient alternative to paper filing for lawyers and parties in a case, as well as for circuit courts. eFiling allows parties to file and access documents without a trip to the courthouse and reduces the need for physical storage space.

The rule took effect July 1, 2016. Mandatory eFiling is being phased in according to a schedule the director of state courts sets on a county-by-county or case-type basis. Mandatory eFiling was established first in a small number of pilot counties that already offer voluntary eFiling in civil, family, small claims, and paternity cases and then expanded in those case types to other counties statewide by the end of 2017.

Rock County went to mandatory eFiling on Aug. 15, 2017. Other case types will be added with a targeted completion date for mandatory eFiling in all case types statewide by Dec. 31, 2019.

Changing Culture

Before I took office, the general feeling in the office was to maintain the status quo and not to convert to eFiling. The previous Clerk of Circuit Court, judges and staff were comfortable with a paper system that had worked well for them. System changes are difficult and is there was fear of the unknown. No one took interest in learning about eFiling or lead the change because there was little incentive or desire to convert systems.

It became clear to me early in my first term that eFiling was coming to Rock County and I needed to take a proactive approach to make it happen. That entailed not only my learning details of how the conversion would take place, but changing attitudes of my staff and supervisors about the pending system change. I made a conscious decision along with the judges and my supervisory staff to wait for the mandatory conversion date. There was no need to rush into it before we trained and prepared the staff, supervisors and court officers for the pending change.

Conversion

We created standard text been in place for years and in some for staff to use. Acronyms were removed. Entries were simplified to be user friendly for the public.

Along with the re-training of staff regarding entry of court record events, we began scanning documents to case files.

paper cases files that were electronically scanned. Before we could convert to eFiling, all documents in all active case files had to be scanned. This was a labor-intensive process.

In addition to their regular duties, staff took on scanning all documents and attaching them to the court record event.

We looked at procedures and processes. Many had to be revised to long-term employees for their own work efficiently with the new elec- reasons were not comfortable with not fill the vacant positions imme-

Once eFiling became mandatory, counties were no longer scheduled for voluntary conversion. CCAP scheduled Rock County for conversion to eFiling on Aug. 15, 2017.

We ran a dual system of electron-We worked in a dual world of ic files and paper files to make sure we had a seamless conversion from Aug. 15, 2017, to Jan. 1 of this year.

Once we began maintaining only electronic files, the wait times for documents to be processed decreased significantly. Cases are opened or documents filed within 24 hours, with few exceptions.

Change in the workplace is difficult. The vast majority of employees rose to the occasion. Several the new technology and new way of doing business. Shortly after implementing eFiling, I had three staff members retire and one resign.

To bring in new staff during implementation was not prudent. I decided to allow staff to work overtime rather than try and fill the positions with untrained new employees. It made no sense to train new employees on the dual system and my supervisors and I were helping current staff through the learning phases of eFiling.

I have two new staff members and another will begin working with us in August 2018. Overtime for scanning has ended.

Cost savings due to vacant positions greatly outweighed the cost of overtime incurred. Year to date, my personnel costs are nearly $48,000 under budget. This is because I did diately and have staggered hiring of new staff.

Benefits of eFiling eFiling users are able to view the complete court file for each of their cases, from any computer, at any hour, and will be able to view documents as soon as they are filed. Attorneys may delegate access to their staff in order to view the court file, pay filing fees, and prepare and file pleadings.

Attorneys may also allow clients access to view the court file if they so choose. The routine costs of copying, mailing, and delivery services will be substantially reduced for many law offices.

Self-represented litigants and agents who appear on behalf of an entity filing fewer than 10 actions a year (typically smaller landlords and small business owners) are not required to participate in the eFiling system.

However, CCAP (Consolidated Court Automation Programs) works with interested groups to make the system as user-friendly as possible, to maximize the number of self-represented litigants who participate voluntarily.

The advantages to the Court System are numerous. Clerks have seen reductions in the time spent on data entry, imaging, moving and storing files, and mailing.

The complete court file will be available simultaneously to multiple users: at the public access terminal in the clerk's office, in the judge's chambers, to the judicial assistant, and in the law offices of attorneys on the case.

As I look to 2019, I am evaluating potential cost savings to the taxpayer by possibly reducing staff through attrition as well as better use of staff time on quality control. Summary

It's been a long process and it's still not complete. Currently, civil (CV), small claims (SC), family (FA), paternity (PA), criminal (CR, CM & CT), traffic (TR), ordinances (FO), formal (PR) and informal (IN) probate cases are mandatory.

Rock County offers voluntary eFiling for guardianship (GN) and commitment (ME) cases along with judgment and lien (CL, CO, FJ, HL, OL & TJ) cases. By Dec. 31, 2019, all case types will be mandatory. I seek re-election so that I can see this project through to completion.

Don't miss Wildflower Art fest this Saturday, Aug. 11

By Michele Benesh CORRESPONDENT

Brodhead's 8th Annual Wildflower Art Festival, part of Brodhead Chamber of Commerce annual Covered Bridge Days, will be an event not to be missed! Open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 11, in shady Veterans Park on State Highway 11 next to the depot museum, it is a juried fine art show featuring talented artists displaying and selling their work.

Media of all kinds, including painting, wood, glass, ceramics, fiber, jewelry, photography, graphics, and garden art will be represented. There will be live music all day, including:

Local string group "Breakaway Fiddle," led by Ann Uresk, performing on the bandstand from 9 until 11 a.m.;

A stage performance at 1 p.m. on the bandstand by "modern-day troubadour" Paul Imholte of Minnesota, who will also be strolling the grounds before and after his stage show.

Homemade ice cream will again be available in the park.

Three local artists will be exhibiting:

Christine Dieckhoff, jewelry artist who has sold her work at the festival for 7 years;

Photographer Julie Dybevik, whose gorgeous Brodhead area shots have been seen frequently on a local Facebook page and have served as background on Madison's channel 3 weather several times (making her art fair debut);

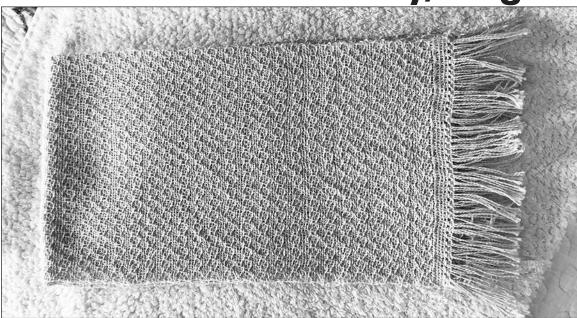

Phyllis Baxter, fiber artist whose beautiful woven scarves and other items would make wonderful gifts.

The park will be full of so many treasures that attendees will have a hard time deciding what to purchase.

Several of the fine artists in this show have been long-time exhibitors at many art shows, and several also have their work displayed in art galleries.

You may have seen some of them at the Garden Expo in Madison this spring.

It will be fascinating and educational for all ages and will highlight the native plantings on the bank of the Mill Race as well as explaining the importance of native landscapes.

The tour will also cross to the other side of the Mill Race and walk along the Pearl Island trail, learning about the plants and animals there.

Summer fun for farmers and eaters

Wisconsin Farmers Union South Central Chapter members in Green, Rock and Lafayette counties gathered at the Riemer Family Farm near Brodhead July 15 for their summer meeting and potluck. Local consumer and farmer members are now looking to the state Summer Conference next Thursday, Aug. 16, at Kamp Kenwood. Come along, and you can build skills to get your voice heard on issues important to you. This year's conference features a hands-on workshop on communication skills (letters to the editor, social media and talking to neighbors oneon-one). Bring a pie to share for our pie contest. (Not a baker? Come eat someone else's award-winning pie!) The conference runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Kamp Kenwood, 19161 79th Ave., Chippewa Falls. There is also an Acorn Day Camp for ages 7 and up from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Aug. 16. The cost is $15 per child. RSVP to the WFU state office at 715-723-5561.

Dairy farmer invites attendance at forum to press solutions to crisis

By Josh Nett WEU DAIRY FARMER

In June I attended the Wisconsin State Future Farmers of America Convention in Madison to watch our oldest son receive a gold award in Dairy Proficiency.

I am always impressed with how the FFA continues to help shape and inspire tomorrow's leaders. The enthusiasm that these young people have for agriculture is nothing short of amazing.

"In the promise of better days through better ways" is a line from the famous FFA creed written in 1928. What a powerful statement -and yet as I look at the current state of our dairy industry I question if we've done enough.

Or have we done just as was expected from us? Are we satisfied thousands of cows, with our farms and farmland increasingly owned by outside investors?

I'm still convinced that the future of agriculture depends on giving a young person a chance to build a good herd of cattle or a good farm from the ground up or to become the next generation to gain an appreciation for the hard work and the commitment that takes a lifetime to develop.

Yes, some will try and fail, but some will succeed. Some will persevere to pass the love and knowledge for agriculture down to future generations.

None of this is achievable unless we work to reshape our dairy indus-

I don't think we have to continue that we've created an industry that down this path of continued consol-is trending toward having tens of idation and outside investment in agriculture. I believe there is a place for family farms on the land.

I believe in an alternate future for dairy farmers -- one other than this rollercoaster we've been on. It is one where fair, stable prices are the norm rather than the exception.

I believe my fellow farmers and others in our agricultural community need to take a hard look at where we are headed and band together for change if we are going to change course.

That's why I'll be among the Wisconsin dairy farmers who will board a bus and travel to Albany, New York, this week, Sunday through Tuesday, Aug. 12-14.

I'll be joining other farmers from across the country for a hard look at federal-level solutions to the dairy crisis.

Cooperatives, legislators, farmers effort. and others with a stake in the future of dairy will all be at the table. The meeting is being held by the farmer-owned cooperative Agri-Mark.

The bus trip is part of a Dairy Together effort by Wisconsin Farmers Union that has brought together farmers from different organizations across Wisconsin -- and other states.

Our common vision is of rebuilding a viable dairy economy for family farmers and our rural communities

If you, too, look ahead and worry about where our dairy industry is headed and wonder if the next generation has a future on your farm, I hope you'll consider joining this

Let's fill the bus and do all that we can to stop this trend of losing 500 dairy herds each year in Wisconsin. Contact state Farmers Union Government Relations Associate Bobbi Wilson: bwilson@wisconsinfarmersunion.com or 608-234-3741 to save your spot on the bus.

"In the promise of better days through better ways.'

Editor's Note: Josh Nett milks 250 cows and farms 400 acres with his wife, Terri, on their Waushara County farm. They have two teenage sons who also are involved in the farm. Josh started farming in 1993 and bought his current farm in 2007. He grew up helping his grandparents on their dairy farm.
