Boys Scouts of America accepts girls into program

BSA PRESS RELEASE

Last year the Boy Scouts of America Board of Directors unanimously approved to welcome girls into its iconic Cub Scout program. The program aims to deliver a Scouting program for older girls that will enable them to advance and earn the highest rank of Eagle Scout.

The historic decision comes after years of receiving requests from families and girls. The organization evaluated the results of numerous research efforts. They gained input from current members and leaders to understand how to offer families an important additional choice in meeting the character development needs of all the children.

Michael Surbaugh, the Boy Scout of America's Chief Scout Executive, stated in a press release, "This decision is true to the BSA's mission and core values outlined in the Scout Oath and Law. The values of Scouting – trustworthy, loyal, helpful, kind, brave and reverent, for example – are important for both young men and women."

Surbaugh goes on to say, "We believe it is critical to evolve how our programs meet the needs of families interested in positive and life-long experiences for their children. We strive to bring what our organization does best – developing character and leadership for young people – to as many families and youth as possible as we help shape the next generation of leaders."

Families today are busier and more diverse than ever. Most are dual-earners and there are more single-parent households than ever before, making convenient programs that serve the whole family more appealing. Additionally, many groups currently underserved by Scouting, including the Hispanic and Asian communities, prefer to participate in activities as a family. Recent surveys of parents not involved with Scouting showed high interest in getting their daughters signed up for programs like Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts. Almost 90 percent of parents express interest in a program like Cub Scouts and 87 percent expressing interest in a program like Boy Scouts. Education experts also evaluated the curriculum and content and confirmed relevancy of the program for young women.

Randall Stephenson, BSA's national board chairman, says, "The BSA's record of producing leaders with high character and integrity is amazing. I've seen nothing that develops leadership skills and discipline like this organization. It is time to make these outstanding leadership development programs available to girls."

Starting in 2018, families can choose to sign up their sons and daughters for Cub Scouts. Existing packs may choose to establish a new girl pack, establish a pack that consists of girl dens and boy dens or remain an all-boy pack. Cub Scout dens will be single-gender – all boys or all girls.

Using the same curriculum as the Boy Scouts program, the organization will deliver a program for older girls, which will be announced in 2018 and projected to be available in 2019 that will enable them to earn the Eagle Scout rank. This unique approach allows the organization to maintain the integrity of the single gender model while also meeting the needs of today's families.

This decision expands the programs that the Boy Scouts of America offers for both boys and girls. Although known for its iconic programs for boys, the BSA has offered co-ed programs since 1971 through the Exploring and the Venturing program. The Science Technology Engineering and Math (STEM) Scout pilot program is also available for both boys and girls.

Monroe Clinic hosts roundtable discussion

More than 45 community leaders in public health, health care, law enforcement, community outreach, and faith organizations met to learn more about the Department of Safety and Professional Services (DSPS) Prescription Drug Monitoring Program.

DSPS Secretary Laura Gutierrez called for collaboration among community stakeholders in Green County and throughout the state to effectively combat the opioid drug issue at the discussion last week.

Andrea Magermans, DSPS program and policy analyst, provided an overview of the electronic Prescription Drug Monitoring Program used in Wisconsin.

The database allows health care providers to see a patient's prescription history as well as determine how many prescriptions the patient is accessing. This information allows doctors to better discern when need turns into abuse.

Law enforcement can enter drug abuse incidents into the program to give a more complete picture. The patient information is protected and follows the strictest Patient Information security regulations, sponsors stated.

Magermans shared that between implementation in 2015 and 2017, the state recorded a 14 percent reduction in dispensed drugs.

Chelsea Hardacre is the Monroe Clinic's Director of Quality Assurance and co-chair of Monroe Clinic's drug prescription protocol committee. "Doctors and providers are a part of the solution," Hardacre stated, "Monroe Clinic is proactively implementing processes and protocols that help guide pain management so that is effective and includes alternative options to controlled pain medications."

Tammie Jamiska, Monroe Clinic's Community Outreach Specialist, stated, "My hope is that this round table is just the start of a continuing conversation." "Mental health is a high priority for our community and the current drug abuse issue is just one factor that impacts the mental health of our community members," Jamiska stated.

Understanding the opioid epidemic, its presence in Rock County

By Emma Peterson
AMERICORPS VISTA

Opioids accounted for 42,000 deaths in the United States in 2016. Rock County alone lost 33 residents to opioid overdoses that year. The number of overdose deaths involving opioids in 2016 was five times higher than in 1999. On average, 115 Americans die every day from an opioid overdose.

What are Opioids?

Opioid is a broad term used to describe both natural opiates and human-created opiates. Natural opiates include substance like heroin and morphine, while human-created opiates include substances like hydrocodone, oxycodone, and fentanyl.

Opioids are both legal and illegal substances. Heroin is an example of an illegal opiate and is classified as a Schedule I substance by the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA).

Prescription drugs, like OxyContin (oxycodone) and Vicodin (hydrocodone) are examples of legal opiates. Opioid prescriptions are classified as a schedule II controlled substance by the DEA and should be monitored carefully.

Opioid overdose deaths are preventable with the following tips

- Store all opioid prescription drugs in medication lock boxes (available through Janesville Mobilizing 4 Change (JM4C), Building A Safer Evansville, Healthy Edgerton, and Youth 2 Youth at no cost).

- Explore other pain management options (ask your health care provider for suggestions).

- Safely dispose of your leftover medication at a prescription drug drop box location (many police departments have boxes)

- Attend a community Narcan training (contact your local prevention coalition for more information).

Narcan is an opioid overdose reversal drug that can save someone's life.

If you see someone having an overdose, call 911 immediately. Stay with the person and monitor his or her condition. If you're unable to stay, you should still call 911.

Emma Peterson is a volunteer serving with the Rock County Public Health Department.

If you want to ask Emma an opioid-related question, e-mail her at Emma.peterson@co.rock.wi.us. Rock County Public Health Department reserves the right not to answer any questions deemed unsuitable. For more information, follow us on Facebook at rockcountyPHD.

Orfordville variance request tabled pending more information

Bob Dahl of 138 South Walnut Street requested a variance to be allowed to have a four foot tall fence in his front yard, 15 feet from the center of South Walnut Street.

A current ordinance requires front yard fences of four feet tall to be 35 feet back from the center of the road.

Dahl explained that he has six grandchildren and does not have much of a back yard to fence. Dahl further explained his frustration with people who do not stop on South Richards Street heading north. The board held a discussion about traffic problem on South Richards Street. Steve Larsen suggested that Dahl petition the village board to place another stop sign at the intersection, making it a three-way stop.

The board went on to discuss the proximity of the road and the line of site at the intersection. Clerk Sherri Waege advised the board that the building inspector suggested a survey be done in this situation. The survey would evaluate the proximity of the road and the importance of the line of site at the intersection.

Dahl said that he did have a survey done previously, but did not have it with him.

The variance request was tabled until the board's next meeting.

The board voted to table the request. This allows Dahl time to mark out the area where the fence will be located and to have the engineer mark out the line of site at the intersection.

The next meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 20.

Green County committees to meet this week

The Property, Parks, and Insurance committees are meeting Friday, Sept. 7 at 10 a.m. in the first floor conference room at the Green County Courthouse.

The agenda includes a discussion of Resolution 9-1-18: Sale of .84 Acres located in the Town of Spring Grove to Adjoining Landowner Judith C. Thompson. Discussion of the 2019 property budget and 2018 budget funds for court projects is also scheduled to occur.

One-room schoolhouses: Their purpose, history and legacy in Rock County

Luther Valley Historical Society is presenting a discussion about one-room schoolhouses next week.

Kristin Arnold is the archives manager at Rock County Historical Society will lead the program. Participants will learn the history and development of one-room schoolhouses and look at schoolhouse artifacts.

This event is on Thursday, Sept. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at 215 Janesville St., Footville. The evening includes treats.

Orfordville Board approves bid from Schlittler Construction for a residential clean up

Related to an ongoing ordinance violation, Raupp compared bids with the village board last week from Eggleston

Construction and Schlittler Construction. Police Chief Brian Raupp further explained that he spoke with the property owner at 314 North Main Street and he is aware of the village's actions in regards to the cleanup.

Raupp stated in an email, "The Schlittler Construction clean up of the property is a case that I started working on in January when I took over. A property in the village has had a long history, dating back to 2013, of accumulating trash, rubbish, piles of stuff... etc, which gives vermin and mosquitos places to live and raises other health concerns." The board awarded the bid to Schlittler Construction for $1,250, which was the low bid.

In other business, Chief Raupp explained to the village board a resolution that establishes guidelines for the Police Committee to research liquor license and bartender license applications. It also gives a general outline of when and why a license would be denied or granted based on Wisconsin Statutes, case law, and village ordinances

A motion passed by the board, to adopt Resolution R-2018-10 to establish guidelines for the issuance of alcohol beverage licenses in the Village of Orfordville.

The Dairy Revenue Protection program is a new option for Wisconsin dairy farmers.

New crop insurance program may benefit Wisconsin dairy farmers

A new federal crop insurance program may help Wisconsin dairy farmers protect against low milk prices.

The American Farm Bureau Federation and its insurance company recently announced the Dairy Revenue Protection program, Wisconsin Public Radio reported.

The program, which is available in October, allows farmers to set a guaranteed amount of revenue they want to make on a certain amount of milk. Farmers can receive an indemnity payment if their actual revenue doesn't meet the set level. Insurance costs are determined by expected milk prices and market risk.

Jim Holte, president of the Wisconsin Farm Bureau, stated in a press release, "It allows the individual farmer to pick both the amounts of milk he wants to protect price on and the months in which that milk is produced."

The program is modeled after existing federal crop insurance programs for corn, soybeans and other commodities each growing season. The program for milk is different because dairy is produced year-round. Farmers are able to make changes daily.

The cost of coverage may not be affordable to farmers after nearly four years of low milk prices.

"As we return to a more normal pattern of milk prices, the futures prices will offer more opportunities to farmers to lock in a profitable level," Holte said.

The federal government will subsidize costs for farmers, but Holte still expects farmers to be hesitant to buy coverage.

Brian Gould is a Professor of Agribusiness at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He said, "Farmers face a learning curve in figuring out how to take advantage of the insurance with the changing markets. The new program is a welcome change from existing safety net options for dairy, which calculate indemnity payments based on a profit margin between milk prices and input costs.

"Farmers like a contract that you can count on, that is actually reflecting the type of market that you're selling your milk into," Gould said.

served as a role model and mentor to local youth, especially those who were interested in agriculture. Jeff dedicated his life to farming, which was his first love.

He ran the family farm starting right after graduation and continued in that role until his death. He also proudly served on the board of director's for Midwest Dairymen for 18 years, Mt. Pleasant township board and was the Midwest representative for Lakeshore Federated Dairy Co-op. He was also an avid supporter of the Albany FFA and would willingly donate to local community groups.

Letter to the editor

Honoring the men and women who build Wisconsin

On Labor Day, we honor the men and women who build our communities. From roads to bridges, schools and municipal buildings, Wisconsin's construction industry has contributed to our local development, advancement and strength for decades. And the construction industry builds people, too, by prioritizing well-paying jobs, professional advancement and lifelong learning.

Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) of Wisconsin and our more than 870 members have been setting the standard for excellence in construction since 1976, and workforce development remains one of our strategic goals. Our chapter – the largest of 72 ABC chapters throughout the country – is working hard to recruit and train the next generation of construction workers. These efforts are most evident in our apprenticeship program, which features more than 1,500 workers who are receiving paid on-the-job instruction in 12 different construction trades.

Our industry as a whole continues to face skilled worker shortages. That is why ABC of Wisconsin is committed to working with our industry peers, local leaders and state policymakers to spread the word about family sustaining jobs in construction, and to invest in construction apprenticeship, on-the-job instruction, safety training, workforce development and management education programs.

To succeed as an industry and as a state, we must redouble efforts to recruit and educate current and future generations of construction workers – the men and women who build Wisconsin.

Sincerely,
John Mielke
President
Associated Builders and Contractors of Wisconsin

Wisconsin Sheep and Wool Festival begins Sept. 7

Littledale Farm in Richland Center is exhibiting purebred Scottish Blackface and North Country Cheviot sheep. They are being featured in the Hall of Breeds at the Wisconsin Sheep and Wool Festival. The Festival takes place Friday, Sept. 7 through Sunday, Sept. 9 at Jefferson Fair Park, Jefferson. The sheep from Littledale are examples of British hill sheep, the most numerous breeds in the United Kingdom. Hill sheep are hardy, thrifty, easy care sheep. They are maintained on pasture in summer and hay in the winter without the need for grain. More information about the husbandry of Scottish Blackface and North Country Cheviot sheep can be seen on our website www.Littledalefarm.com.

Red Hill Birding to present co-sponsored discussion

Join Sinissippi and Green-Rock Audubon Chapters as they welcome Josh Engel to talk about Red Hill Birding on Sept. 18.

Birds have been central to Engel's life for as long as he can remember.

He learned that there was something called "birding" at age 12 and pursued it by biking around Evanston, Ill., where he grew up. He talked his parents into taking him exploring, or hitched rides with adult birders.

He followed birds to all corners of the globe, especially for research and guiding, as he tried to transform his passion into a career. It led to his current endeavor, running his company Red Hill Birding. Engel organizes and leads birding tours around Illinois, the United States, and the world.

Engel is discussing the positive influence of birders and birding organizations on his path.

The co-sponsored program is Tuesday, Sept. 18 at 6:30 p.m. at Nature at the Confluence in South Beloit, Ill. This event is free. No registration is required.

BTC advisor receives state award

Academic Advisor Susan Dantuma has received the Advising Profession Impact Award from the Wisconsin Academic Advising Association (WACADA). This award is presented annually to a higher education professional in Wisconsin who has distinguished achievement in developing new, creative and effective programs to meet student needs.

Dantuma is an academic advisor who serves students in the Health Sciences Division.

Dr. Melissa Lantta, Student Pathways Coordinator, said in a press release, "Suzy is a student-focused leader on our academic advising team. She is instrumental in training new academic advisors and has created a peer-advising program here at Blackhawk to help students be more successful."

Academic advisors serve an integral part of the student services team. Advisors encourage and guide students in developing their academic plans. From exploring options to selecting classes, advisors help students achieve their educational and career goals.

Nominations for this recognition were received from UW-System colleges and universities, private colleges, and colleges in the Wisconsin Technical College System. Anthony Landowski, Executive Director of Student Services, said, "We are proud of Suzy for receiving this distinguished honor. She lives out our mission every day of providing a supportive environment for our students."

WACADA is comprised of 250 professional members and is an affiliate of the National Academic Advising Association. The organization provides opportunities for networking and professional development, supports and promotes professional standards of academic advising, and fosters recognition of academic advising as a profession.

Dantuma is being honored and presented with the award in Platteville during the WACADA Annual Conference on Thursday, Sept. 13.

For more information about the WACADA Awards, visit the WACADA website at www.wacada.org/ or contact the WACADA Awards Committee Chair Janay Alston at alstonjs@matc.edu.

Faculty bring real-world experience to BTC students

From building kitchen countertops to coaching rugby in South Africa, one particular Blackhawk Technical College faculty member brings an eclectic set of experiences to the classroom.

Supply Chain Management launched at BTC in 2017 and is graduating its first class this spring. The program is offered entirely online via MyEdChoice flexible learning options. It is designed and implemented to meet the growing demand for quality workers in local transportation and logistics industry.

Andrew Panici is an apparel and hard parts buyer for LeMans Corporation by day and a Supply Chain Management adjunct instructor by night.

Once a struggling student, Panici is now a professional who manages millions of dollars of inventory for a large distribution company. While pursuing his MBA, Panici worked full-time as a college academic advisor and part-time as a limo driver. He knows all too well the struggles of work-life-school balance.

Although he no longer juggles being a student with multiple jobs, his students gain from his experiences. "I have survived what most of my students are currently experiencing with going back to school and working full time," says Panici.

BTC hires faculty who can bring courses to life. Jeff Kropp, Department Chair of the BTC Business Division, said, "Faculty like Andy help students understand the realities and challenges of the industry. He brings practical experience to the classroom to help better develop students in the Supply Chain Management Program." Panici has many roles at LeMans Corporation, one of the largest distributors of aftermarket parts in the power sports industry. He plans, forecasts, and manages over 8,500 parts with annual revenue of over $10 million using Distribution Resource Planning (DRP) and other programs. In order to be successful, Panici must collaborate with sales, marketing, and development teams. Together they develop new products, evaluate current inventory, and establish forecast goals and future contracts with over 20 vendors all over the world. Many of the products he buys come from overseas. He is constantly monitoring tariffs and duty rates, which may increase costs, which then increases dealer and retail prices.

Panici attributes his success to words of wisdom from his father who encouraged him to have a professional backup plan. He explains, "My father always said that you need to have something to fall back on in case your first option doesn't work out." In a time when many employers are struggling to find and retain a quality, skilled workforce, Panici has survived many economic hard times by leaning on his vast experience and skillset. Now, he takes pride in helping his students.

He says, "It sounds cliché, but I enjoy the students. There is such a highly diverse population at BTC and I am often learning from them just as much as they are learning from me."

Department of Agriculture sets guidelines for flooded produce fields

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection is warning produce growers and consumers about produce safety after a flooding event. Dr. Steve Ingham, Division Administrator for the Division of Food and Recreational Safety, said in a press release, "You should discard all produce that was touched by flood water unless you can confirm the water was not contaminated with sewage, river or creek water, farm run-off, or industrial pollutants."

Ingham also said, "Never sell produce from a flood-damaged garden at a farmer's market. It typically takes at least one month after the last flooding incident for all contamination to be removed from the garden."

With gardens in full harvest mode, growers need to use guidelines for considering what must be discarded and what can be salvaged.

Guidelines to follow

- Discard all produce that is normally consumed raw or uncooked. This includes leafy vegetables and soft fruits that have ridges and crevices that are impossible to clean.

- Evaluate produce that can be cooked or canned. While the heat of cooking or canning will reduce the risk of microbial food-borne illnesses, it will not eliminate the risk from industrial pollutants.

- Evaluate produce that has not come into contact with floodwater on a case-by-case basis. Produce with an outer impenetrable skin or husk that is removed may be suitable for washing with water and then sanitizing to reduce the risk of food-borne illness.

More information on evaluating produce safety after a flood can be found on the University of Wisconsin-Extension's horticulture website at <https://hort.uwex.edu/articles/safely-using-produce-flooded-gardens/>.

You should also check your well water for contamination. Well water contamination can occur if flood water enters the top of your well or migrates underground to your well from a neighbor's flooded well. If you normally use well water to clean produce, switch to a known safe source until your well is disinfected and you obtain a well-water test result indicating a safe water supply.

More information about well water sampling kits and testing are available from the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources at <https://dnr.wi.gov/topic/wells/flood.html>.

A list of DATCP resources for flood victims is available at https://datcp.wi.gov/Pages/Programs\_Services/Floods.aspx.

Information about the flooding in Wisconsin and a complete list of resources statewide are available on the Wisconsin Emergency Management's website at <http://ready.wi.gov/flooding/AUG2018.asp>.

Consider CREP for crops underwater

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Farmers whose corn or soybeans are standing in water after this week's heavy rains in southern Wisconsin might think about enrolling those lands in CREP, says Brian Loeffelholz.

Loeffelholz coordinates the program for the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection.

CREP is the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program. It's one component of the federal Conservation Reserve Program, or CRP. The CREP program offers both state and federal financial incentives to landowners who install conservation practices along waterways, or return continually flooded fields or pastures to wetlands. Adjacent land can remain in agricultural production. There is no minimum acreage, and landowners may enroll land under either a 15-year agreement or a perpetual easement.

"When we visited some CREP sites in the flooded parts of the state the next day, the value of the program was very clear," he said. "On one side of the road, corn would be submerged in water, nutrients were likely running off, and reduced yields or complete crop loss looked inevitable. On the other side, CREP lands were doing their job, absorbing and retaining water and keeping the soil and nutrients where they belonged."

Lands in 50 Wisconsin counties are eligible for CREP. To be eligible, the land must have been in production at least four years between 2008 and 2013. CREP offers at least three types of payments.

Types of payments

- Annual payments, typically ranging from $94 to $300 an acre with an average of about $200 statewide, and for pasture land, $45 to $80, with an average of $60.

- One-time incentive payments based on the annual rental rate of the enrolled land, and averaging $250 an acre statewide for 15-year contracts and $2,000 an acre for perpetual easements.

- Practice payments will cover at least 70 percent of the cost of installing conservation practices.

The program is open to landowners enrolling for the first time, or to landowners interested in re-enrolling a 15-year contract that is expiring. To re-enroll or enroll lands for the first time, they should call or visit their local USDA Farm Service Agency office.

"If you're looking at fields that are under water right now, you might want to think about enrolling those lands in CREP," Loeffelholz said. "If you're losing crops or replanting frequently, CREP could help you recoup some of those losses this year. In the future, you wouldn't have crop losses. Instead, you would have a guaranteed income from that acreage."

Available practices include filter strips that place grasslands between crops and water, riparian buffers planted to trees and shrubs between crops and water, and wetland restorations on sites smaller than 40 acres. All these practices reduce flooding impacts by stopping water and allowing it to seep into the soil and subsoil and filtering it before it enters streams.

For more information visit datcp.wi.gov and search for CREP.

KOATS for kids

The "Koats for Kids" campaign begins Oct. 16.

WISC-TV3 announces 33rd annual 'Koats for Kids' campaign

Area residents, school children and businesses have joined together during "Koats for Kids" since 1986 to donate 316,948 coats to individuals and families in need.

WISC-TV3, Klinke Cleaners, Community Action Coalition, and Magic 98 (98.1FM) are partnering once again for the 33rd annual "Koats for Kids" winter coat drive.

Area residents in this program can take gently worn winter outerwear, hats, scarves and mittens (pinned in pairs), to any Klinke Cleaners.

Klinke cleans donations free of charge. It then hands them off to the Community Action Coalition for distribution.

Gently used winter outerwear of all sizes are requested and appreciated, as are snow pants, scarves, hats and mittens/gloves. Items in the greatest demand include infant and toddler snowsuits and jackets, larger teen jackets (sizes 16-22) and oversized adult outerwear (XXXL and larger).

This year's campaign runs Monday, Sept. 10 through Saturday, Oct. 6.

Channel 3000 Chief Meteorologist Gary Cannalte and weather team, along with Magic 98's Pat O'Neill and Ginger Martin, serve as campaign spokespeople. They appear in public service announcements airing on WISC-TV3, TVW and Magic 98 (98.1FM) throughout the "Koats for Kids" campaign.

On-air segments, including a daily coat count and additional information, air Monday through Friday on the "News 3 This Morning" segment and Monday through Saturday on the "News 3 at six" segment.

Radio listeners can also follow campaign progress by tuning in to Magic 98 for updates throughout the day.

The Community Action Coalition welcomes volunteers to help sort coats and assist with distribution. Those who can spare an hour or two may contact Carissa Cornwell, of the C.A.C., via email (carissac@cacsw.org) or by phone (608-246-4730, ext. 229) for details.

Coat distribution is commencing Oct. 16 and run through Nov. 8 at the C.A.C.'s Free Clothing Center, 1717 N. Stoughton Road, Madison.

For hours and registration details, contact the Community Action Coalition at 608-246-4730 or visit the CAC's website at www.cacsw.org.

HEALTH DAY NEWS PRESS RELEASE

Want to help your kids succeed at school? Watch what they eat.

Research shows that children who have a nutritious breakfast have better concentration, more energy and do better in school, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP).

Some schools provide breakfast. If your children's school does not, make sure they eat a breakfast at home that includes some protein.

Hunger can impair classroom performance. Many children qualify for free or lower-priced food at school. Forms are available at your school's office.

Many school districts have plans that enable parents to pay for their children's meals through an online account. With this approach, kids have a card they swipe or a number to enter at the lunch register.

If your school sends cafeteria menus home or posts them online, use that information to pack lunch for the days your child likes the least. Find out if your school has a la carte choices in addition to the standard menu.

When packing a drink, choose water, juice or low-fat dairy products instead of soda. Each 12-ounce soda contains about 10 teaspoons of sugar and 150 calories. Drinking just one can of soda a day increases a child's risk of obesity by 60 percent.

Juda School holding auditions for 2018 musical

Juda School is looking for students to audition for their 2018 musical Big. The musical is based on the 1988 movie starring Tom Hanks. Auditions are Wednesday, Sept. 5 and Thursday, Sept. 6 after school. Audition packets are located outside the classrooms of Mrs. Fox and Mrs. Williams.

Juda Panthers rally against Barneveld Eagles

By Trenten Scheidegger
SPORTS CORRESPONDENT

Juda volleyball faced off with Barneveld on the Panthers' home court last Thursday. Each set was a hard, close-fought battle between the Panthers and Eagles.

Juda teammates found themselves up early, after winning the first two sets with a score of 25-20 and 25-21. Barneveld bounced back in the third set. The Eagles' Kennedy Gordan led a strong serving performance and would go on to win set three by a score of 25-21.

Barneveld players carried their momentum over into set four, jumping out to an early 10-5 lead. This caused Juda to call both timeouts. The timeouts seemed to work. Juda's Hannah Powers started a rally for the Panthers with four straight kills. After climbing back to a 22-18 lead, a kill from Briana Crull set the Panthers up for their third and final victory of the day. Coach Scott Anderson, excited after the set four victory, said, "This is a big win. We were mentally tough after dropping game three. We chased and dug, and it was the difference for our team."

Juda's defensive stats certainly backed up Coach Anderson's claims. With 80 team digs, 13 of which came from Montana Steinman, they fought off the Eagles for a 3-1 victory.

SUBMITTED PHOTOS Brodhead Independent-Register

The 2017 Juda Toy Show had an abundance of toys for sale.

Collectibles were a feature of the toy show in 2017.

An opportunity for early Christmas shopping is coming to the 30th Annual Juda Toy Show. This event is on Sept. 9 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Community Center/Fire Department in Juda.

A scrambled egg/ham casserole breakfast is being served from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and lunch is from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Root beer floats and ice cream sundaes are available all day.

This year there are over 100 tables to browse through. Toys both old and new, farm equipment, handmade crafts, wreaths, doll clothes, brown eggs, jams, jellies, maple syrup, honey, toys and puzzles crafted from wood are available.

There are pieces for the 4-H youth doing small-scale farm displays for fair. There are also small-scale farm displays.

Mums, outside ornaments, pumpkins and gourds are available for fall along with straw for pets for the winter.

A children's pedal tractor pull starts at noon with prizes and trophies in four age categories. Anyone wanting to show off his or her tractors and lawn mowers are invited to register by 10 a.m. the day of the show.

The show is sponsored by the Next Generation 4-H Club and supported by the Juda FFA/FFA Alumni for the past five years.

Youth and adult volunteers work long hours to make the show fresh and exciting every year. Everyone from the community and surrounding area are invited to take a drive to Juda and check it out.

The 2017 Juda Toy Show had a diverse selection of toys to choose from.

Hard to find farm pieces for 4-H projects are available again this year.
