Green County partners with UW-Madison in launching Teen Intervene

A 2018 study indicated that 25 percent of teens in Green County reported alcohol usage in the past 30 days, a statistic that has Green County leaders and community members concerned.

To address this challenge, the county and the University of Wisconsin-Madison UniverCity Year (UCY) program joined forces.

UCY is a three-year program that facilitates engagement between the UW-Madison learning community and localities, ultimately bringing faculty, students and community members together to address some of the greatest challenges facing Wisconsin's local governments.

In this case, UCY partnered Green County public health officials with UW-Madison's Barbara Duerst and students from her Population Health Sciences 780, Public Health Principles and Practice course.

Together they developed promotional material and resources around the Teen Intervene program, which utilizes an evidence-based approach to substance use reduction and prevention for teens with mild to moderate alcohol and other drug use.

"When we connected with Green County, it was about finding something they could use on an ongoing basis," Duerst said in a news release. "We're about helping the community think outside of the box and utilizing evidence based material."

Together, Duerst's students and Green County leaders developed a toolkit and video to educate referral sources about the Teen Intervene program.

Through the program, high-risk teens meet with a prevention specialist to discuss coping skills and set goals for reduced substance abuse.

For Duerst and her students, the main goal is to find ways to share this program with the staff at local schools, parents of teens and those who would be most likely to recommend resources to struggling individuals.

A secondary goal is to give Duerst's students the opportunity to gain experience working on a community-based project.

"It was so unique to have the opportunity to make a deliverable product as a part of the program," said Duerst student Kimberly Breunig, who is working on her dual degree in the Master of Public Health and Master Physician Assistant programs at UW-Madison.

"Rather than conducting a literature review, we had the opportunity to work on a project that was already being implemented," Breunig said. "The main thing the experience taught me was that flexibility is so important when working in public health and that I need to be open-minded and flexible in order to make a difference."

In addition to giving the students a unique experience, the UCY partnership also provided Green County leaders with the assistance and support they needed to bring the Teen Intervene program to the next level.

"It was really a wonderful experience working with UCY," said Bob Gibson, Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse supervisor for the Green County Human Services Department. "As it should be, and as is the case, our department is focused on practice and ensuring that resources are available to individuals in need. We are not marketing specialists, so while we have great programs, people don't always know that they are available. Working with UCY provided the valuable assistance of letting people know about our services. It was also great to have the perspective of the students, who viewed things from a different angle."

The Teen Intervene toolkit developed by Duerst's class and Gibson can be found on the Green County Human Services Department website along with a short video that provides a program overview and explains the referral process to access the program.

Moving forward, Duerst and Gibson said they believe Green County will benefit from this increased awareness and the use of Teen Intervene as well as advocacy around treatment for teen drug and alcohol use.

"To have a partnership like this, where someone can come in and help us to do the research and promote the best practices, is wonderful," Gibson said.

Income guidelines set for school, day care meals

The U.S. Department of Agriculture Food and Nutrition Service recently updated the income eligibility guidelines for meals served at schools and day care programs based on federal poverty levels.

The income guidelines, updated annually, are effective through June 30, 2021, and apply to student eligibility for free and reduced-price school meals offered through the national lunch and breakfast programs and milk offered through the special milk program.

The Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction administers the programs. Reimbursement for meals served in day care centers and family child care homes participating in the Child and Adult Care Food Program are also applicable to the updated income guidelines.

“Having equitable access to these programs is essential,” State Superintendent Carolyn Stanford Taylor said July 29 in a news release. “Our children cannot learn on an empty stomach. Proper nourishment is important to help our students learn, grow and achieve in Wisconsin schools.”

The guidelines establish that students in a household of four, with income of $34,060 per year or less, qualify for free school meals. If that family’s yearly income is between $34,060.01 and $48,470, children are eligible for reduced-price meals.

The state’s participating public and private schools and day cares typically provide applications for free and reduced-price school meals during registration and in the beginning weeks of the school year.

However, applications may be submitted at any time. Only one application is required per household.

Based on family circumstances, certain groups automatically are eligible to receive meal benefits, with eligibility based on program specifics.

Those groups include children who participate in or receive benefits from the following programs: Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) or FoodShare in Wisconsin, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families or Wisconsin Works Cash Assistance in Wisconsin, some programs under Medicaid and Food Distribution Program on Indian Reservations (FDPIR); foster, homeless, migrant or runaway children; children who are enrolled in Head Start, an At-Risk Afterschool program or an emergency shelter; and adults who receive SNAP or FoodShare, FDPIR, Supplemental Security Income or Medicaid participants also are eligible.

For more information about Wisconsin’s child nutrition programs and the USDA’s nondiscrimination statement, visit the DPI’s website at dpi.wi.gov/nutrition.

DNR decides not to hold sharp-tailed grouse hunting season this fall

In light of scientific data and concerns about population viability, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources announced last week that there will be no sharp-tailed grouse hunting season this fall.

With no permits available, no applications will be made available or accepted this year.

Each year, the Sharp-tailed Grouse Advisory Committee uses spring mating survey data to recommend permit levels to the department’s Bureau of Wildlife Management leadership team.

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, surveys were unable to be completed. Partner groups gathered some data, but the data set for 2020 remains incomplete. The advisory committee consists of DNR wildlife biologists and representatives from interested conservation groups.

Without a complete 2020 survey of the population, the committee made its recommendation based on the spring 2019 survey results, the limited 2020 data and a scientific population model, which showed the potential for a marked decrease in sharp-tailed grouse numbers.

Permits were not issued in 2019, though permits were issued in three of the last five years.

Wisconsin has a strong, storied connection to sharp-tailed grouse hunting. Thanks to the passion and commitment of DNR’s partners in conservation, work is ongoing to restore and manage the young forest and barrens habitats that sharp-tailed grouse depend upon for their survival.

As a result of the increased barrens habitat management activities occurring in recent years in northwest Wisconsin, there is great optimism that the population will respond positively to these efforts and Wisconsin will experience an increase in sharp-tailed grouse population data in future years.

More information about sharp sharp-tailed grouse hunting and management is available at this link: dnr.wi.gov/topic/hunt/sharptailgrouse.html. The sharp-tailed grouse survey data can be found at <https://dnr.wi.gov/topic/WildlifeHabitat/reports.html>.

Charter completes broadband project in Orfordville, Footville

Charter Communications, Inc. announced last week the completion of a construction project to bring its fiber-optic network and suite of services to more than 860 residential and business sites in the villages of Orfordville and Footville.

This project follows a similar effort completed earlier this year in the Village of Monticello.

“Charter’s commitment to bring its advanced network and high-speed broadband service to residents in the villages of Orfordville and Footville is to be commended,” state Sen. Janis Ringhand said in a news release. “As we’ve experienced during the COVID-19 pandemic, access to a reliable and fast internet connection is more critical than ever.”

“Our team worked extremely hard to bring our advanced Spectrum services to more residents across southern Wisconsin and to expand access to broadband in the villages of Orfordville and Footville,” Charter regional Vice President Pete Hall said in the news release.

“Charter has a long-standing history of investing in our networks to better serve our customers, and that investment strategy enables us to deliver fast and reliable broadband speeds to more people in more places.”

Charter’s expansion to Orfordville, Footville and Monticello build upon the connection to 31,000 additional homes and businesses across Wisconsin in 2019.

Charter serves customers in more than 475 communities across the state, many of them rural. The company employs more than 3,800 in the state.

Private schools in Janesville prepare for in-person education this fall

By Benjamin Pierce
THE GAZETTE

As school districts statewide grapple with the challenge of re-opening schools safely this fall, four private schools in Janesville say they feel confident their students can return to classrooms.

Smaller class sizes than public schools and larger classrooms are the norm for private schools, several principals said.

Enrollment at Rock County Christian School has jumped 20 percent since school ended in spring. The school will offer in-person instruction for its 300 students five days a week this fall.

Head of Schools Ron Gruber said having two campuses, one in Beloit and one in Janesville, will help the school implement proper social distancing measures.

"We have grade levels that are between 15 and 18 (students) and others that are 30-plus, so it's about trying to make that work and space everybody out," Gruber said. "We have three gym spaces between our two campuses we can use to space students out, too. We will utilize every square foot we have to comply" with social distancing guidelines.

A committee of teachers and parents helped administrators create the reopening plan. Full details will be shared with families next week after school officials digest survey data from families about reopening, Gruber said.

Oakhill Christian School also plans for fully in-person learning this fall. Masks will not be required, but students and faculty will have their temperatures taken twice a day. Hand sanitizer and deep-cleaning measures will be used heavily.

The school has an auditorium, which could be used for social distancing. The school board, parents and faculty helped come up with the plan, Principal Jim Eaker said.

Kim Ehrhardt, principal at St. Mary School, agreed that a smaller student body will help the Catholic school operate within the requirements needed for in-person education. St. Mary will have students in classrooms five days a week.

"I do think we're uniquely capable given our enrollment situation to be able to do in-person education," he said. "Here is where the size situation is a pretty positive attribute that we have that will allow us to do that if, in fact, school starts."

Ehrhardt said the school also could consider virtual learning for any students or families that are uncomfortable returning to school buildings.

St. Matthew's Lutheran School expects to welcome about 75 students from pre-kindergarten through eighth grade when students return to classes at the end of August, said teacher and Principal Kevin Proeber.

A number of safety measures, such as social distancing, temperature checks and hand sanitizer stations, will be implemented. Each child will have access to his/her own mask, but masks will not be required.

The school has a learning system based on four stages. Phase one requires fully virtual instruction, while phase four calls for a return to standard educational practices.

As schools continue to determine how best to educate students amid the pandemic, Proeber said private schools are trying their best.

"What we are doing is trying to do the best we can to keep the children safe with the changing events in the community, while also giving them the education they deserve," he said.

St. Paul's Lutheran School, St. John Vianney School and St. William School did not offer information on their reopening plans.

Circuit court ruling now in effect

A mandate was issued on July 29 by the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals in the One Wisconsin Institute case, meaning that this ruling has gone into effect.

Rock County Clerk Lisa Tollefson on July 30 explained several items in moving forward for area voters.

• In-person absentee voting: Municipalities may not conduct in-person absentee voting earlier than 14 days prior to each election. Because we already are within 14 days of the Aug. 11 Partisan Primary, this will not affect the primary.

• Voter residency: The 10-day residency requirement for voter registration is now 28 days effective immediately.

• Electronic ballot delivery: Municipal clerks may no longer send a regular voter's ballot by email or fax. A military and overseas voter may still receive their ballot by email or fax.

• Student ID as photo ID: If a qualifying student ID used for purposes of meeting the photo ID requirement is unexpired, then a document proving enrollment is no longer required. A document proving enrollment is still required, if the qualifying ID is expired.

Clinic offering pediatric wellness exams

Monroe Clinic understands that routine care for children is important and that kids need to continue to receive care, especially during uncertain times.

Monroe Clinic has taken significant precautions to ensure that children can come in for safe care.

To that end, it is offering pediatric wellness checks.

Annual visits include a comprehensive examination to ensure kids are on track with growth and development. Additionally, the child's provider can:

- Talk with children about any health or wellness concerns he/she may have
- Provide guidance and age-appropriate education about health, safety and behavioral topics
- Help talk with kids about COVID-19 or other concerns they may be having
- Clear children for participation in sports/athletics for school
- Review their records and make sure immunizations and vaccinations are up-to-date

Most annual wellness visits are available through insurance with no out-of-pocket expenses.

Annual wellness visits are available at Monroe Clinic's main campus and branch locations. To set up an appointment, contact your child's provider directly or visit monroeclinic.org/wellnessvisit.

Dr. Lindsay Geier conducts a wellness exam with a boy at the Monroe Clinic's location in New Glarus.

Accepting donations through August 31

Whether it's in school or online, learning is tough when you don't have the right tools handy. We can help our local students this upcoming school year by giving them the tools they need to succeed. Donations will be collected at any of our branches through August 31.

Items needed: Pens, pencils, pink erasers, pencil boxes, notebooks, loose leaf paper, pocket folders, binders, disinfectant wipes, hand sanitizer, facial tissue, face masks, and backpacks.
