Orfordville welcomes new restaurant

ROBIN MARSDEN Brodhead Independent-Register

Downtown Orfordville will see a new business open its doors this week.

Be a part of a Brodhead effort that will benefit future generations

The Brodhead City Council voted, recently, to recommend building a 6,000 square foot Senior/Community Center for $1.4 million.

This came after a Senior/Community Center Committee recommendation to move forward with the Center.

Increasing the amount of areas the public may use to meet, learn, and grow together as a community, is of great importance to the entire Senior/Community Center Committee.

The City has the opportunity to utilize a $500,000 matching Community Development Block Grant to help fund the project. The Brodhead Foundation made a pledge of $100,000 ($20,000 per year for five years).

With the grant and the pledge, approximately 40% of the project would be funded. It is necessary to raise $400,000 by April 1, 2019 to be able to match the grant.

A referendum question will be on the April 2, 2019 ballot, asking voters to decide whether or not to move forward with the project.

Matching the grant and a positive referendum are both conditions of receiving the grant. The balance of the funds will need to be raised to have the project completed by October 2020, which is a grant requirement.

A fund raising campaign will begin shortly. Any and all assistance is needed and appreciated to accomplish these goals in a short timeline.

Anyone willing to assist with this project please call 608-897-4476 and leave a message.

Tax-deductible donations can be dropped off at the Sugar River Bank-Brodhead Branch.

The Guzman family is looking forward to starting their business and being a part of the Orfordville community.

CORRESPONDENT

Orfordville is ringing in the New Year with a new restaurant.

Taqueria Guzman, located at 100 East Spring Street, is a Mexican restaurant being run by a dedicated family. Gustavo Guzman, his wife Rosa Cortez Guzman, his brother-in-law Angel Garcia, Angel's wife Juliana Guzman Garcia, and Gustavo's mother Anna Maria Rodriguez, will be running the restaurant as a team.

Hailing from Janesville and Beloit, they felt Orfordville was the best location for all of them.

The family is very excited to be opening their first restaurant together. They look forward to meeting and getting to know members of the community.

Taqueria Guzman is hosting a grand opening on Friday, Jan. 4 from Noon to 8 p.m. During this event, tacos will be half price. Regular hours begin the next day and are Monday through Saturday 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Taqueria Guzman will serve breakfast, lunch, and dinner with a regular menu and daily specials.

From books, to make-up, to STEM projects for your children, monthly subscription boxes are taking the world of deliveries to a new level, and The Haven Coffee Shop in Orfordville is joining the trend.

Not only is The Haven going to start a monthly delivery service, but also they will be supporting local businesses throughout Wisconsin by doing so.

Starting in January, The Haven is offering a monthly subscription box that includes an artisan coffee roaster from Wisconsin and a Wisconsin treat as well, which may include chocolate candy, or baked goods. The coffee can be whole bean or ground, and a K-cup option is also available.

The box can be delivered straight to your door, or you can pick it up at The Haven. There are three, six, and twelve-month options, and you can join anytime.

Shelley Johnson, co-owner of The Haven, said, "It has been so much fun, and we are excited to feature and help other small businesses in Wisconsin."

Dairy Strong speakers address challenges

One of the Midwest's premiere conferences for the dairy community will be held Jan. 23 and 24 at the Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center in Madison, Wis.

Dairy Strong 2019 will bring together more than 700 farmers, corporate professionals and government and university representatives to explore the future of an integral part of the culture and economy of Wisconsin and the nation.

The conference will include a dynamic discussion about the changing landscape of export markets and the role of agricultural commodities in trade negotiations. Gregg Doud serves as the chief agricultural negotiator, in the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative.

Ken Schmidt, the former director of communications for Harley-Davidson and now a highly sought-after communications consultant, will be a featured speaker. Schmidt played an active role at Harley-Davidson in one of the most celebrated turnarounds in corporate history. He will talk about how to improve competitiveness and reach out to new customers in completely non-traditional ways, which is a timely discussion for the dairy community. Schmidt was a featured speaker at the first Dairy Strong conference in 2015.

Famed geopolitical strategist Peter Zeihan will serve as the economics keynote and closing speaker. Zeihan's worldview marries the realities of geography and populations to a deep understanding of how global politics impact markets and economic trends.

A keynote by sports agency trailblazer Molly Fletcher will kick off the conference. As one of the top agents, she has represented sport's biggest names, including Hall of Fame pitcher John Smoltz, PGA TOUR golfer Matt Kuchar, broadcaster Erin Andrews, and basketball coaches Tom Izzo and Doc Rivers. While Fletcher negotiated more than $500 million in contracts and built lasting relationships, she also observed and adopted the traits of those at the top of their game. She will draw parallels to the dairy community by identifying the traits that allow successful leaders to lean into challenging times, emerging better on the other side.

Newly elected Wisconsin Gov.

Dairy Strong's Innovation Stage in 2018.

Tony Evers has been invited to deliver the state legislative keynote at 9 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 24.

In addition to keynotes, the event will feature track sessions and shorter presentations on the Innovation Stage, presented by CWAS Global, located in the trade show area. Topics range from risk management to advocating for dairy on social media and breakthroughs in dairy nutrition.

New this year is the Wisconsin wine and cheese tasting and pairing stage, presented by HUB International, featuring experts from Dairy Farmers of Wisconsin for cheese education, pairing ideas, fun facts and more.

Current and future trade negotiations

Dairy farmers, along with other commodities, are desperate to make sense of the challenges and opportunities that lie in global markets. We know that trade is a critical solution to this prolonged period of low prices.

As farmers, we often focus on what needs doing today, but it's never been more critical to understand and advocate for trade and global markets. With this in mind, the chief agriculture negotiator for the office responsible for developing and coordinating U.S. international trade, commodity and direct investment policy, and overseeing negotiations with other countries will discuss current trade negotiations and future goals. This presentation will take place from 10-11 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 24.

Leading the discussion will be Gregg Doud, from the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative. Together with 30 key appointed officials, Doud supervises trade negotiations, monitors trade disputes, enforces laws and keeps a constant flow of communication with Congress, industry, nongovernmental organizations and the public on U.S. trade policy.

Doud will call on his first-hand experience with recent trade negotiations, and audience members will have the opportunity to ask pointed questions. The session is open to all registered attendees of Dairy Strong and will be available to view on YouTube after the event via dairystrong.org.

Rethinking school suspensions

School climate offers a clue

UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI-COLUMBIA
A 2012 study by the Everyone Graduates Center at Johns Hopkins University found that when a high school freshman receives a single suspension, their chances of dropping out of school could increase by a third.

Furthermore, only 49 percent of students with three or more suspensions graduate high school. That's nearly a flip of a coin on whether a student receives a diploma or not.

Now, researchers at the University of Missouri and the University of Virginia have found that when educators and administrators focus on creating a positive school climate, the likelihood of a student being suspended decreases by approximately 10 percent. To put this in context, more than 2.75 million K-12 students were suspended during the 2013 to 2014 school year. A 10 percent reduction would have meant 275,000 more students staying in class and learning.

"A positive climate is one where educators and administrators create clear expectations for students, practice consistent discipline and display supportive behavior," said Francis Huang, associate professor in the MU College of Education. "This creates a positive school environment for students because they know what is expected of them, they feel respected and supported, and they expect that they will be treated equally and fairly."

In addition to presenting clear rules to students and enforcing them consistently throughout the school, Huang said a positive school climate features an environment marked by supportive student-teacher relationships.

Huang and co-author Dewey Cornell, a professor of education at the University of Virginia, analyzed school climate survey responses from more than 75,000 students from 310 middle schools in the state of Virginia to determine the relationship between student behaviors, the likelihood of suspensions and overall school climate. They found that while behaviors like fighting and bullying were the most powerful predictors of receiving a suspension, a positive school climate was associated with a reduction in a student's likelihood of receiving a suspension, no matter their race, economic status or behavior in school.

"Research shows that overwhelmingly, the students who are most at risk of receiving a suspension are either male, non-white, of low socioeconomic status, have a disability or a combination of these characteristics," Huang said. "This study suggests that a positive school climate can be helpful for all students, regardless of their background."

Bough in holiday decorations at a Wisconsin chain store shows elongate hemlock scale on the underside of the needles.

Evergreen inspections find new insect pest; burn or bag decorations, officials say

WISCONSIN DATCP RELEASE
Plant health officials are cautioning consumers to burn wreaths and other evergreen decorations, or bag them and put them in the trash, after inspectors found invasive insects on many such items sold at large chain stores in Wisconsin this holiday season.

Inspectors found an insect called elongate hemlock scale, or EHS, on wreaths, swags and boughs, and in arrangements of evergreen boughs in hanging baskets, porch pots, mugs, and sleighs. EHS saps nutrients as it feeds on the underside of conifer needles, and threatens Wisconsin's Christmas tree farms, native hemlock and balsam fir forests, and ornamental conifers in yards and parks.

"It's fine to keep your decorations up for the holiday season, but when it's time to dispose of them, don't put them on the compost pile or set the greens out for brush collection. Burn them if you can. If you can't do that, bag them and send them to the landfill," advised Brian Kuhn, director of the Plant Industry Bureau in the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection. "EHS has survived in the northeastern U.S., so winter weather will not kill it. As a result, if you compost this material, the insects may well attack conifers in your yard or neighborhood, and spread from there."

EHS is native to Asia, and has been introduced into Michigan and many Eastern states. In the past five years, the department's nursery inspectors have found isolated cases of EHS at Christmas tree lots and other outlets selling cut trees and wreaths. The infested stock was destroyed or sent back to suppliers. But this season, they found infested stock at many stores throughout the state; all were part of several major chains. All had received evergreen materials from the same four suppliers in North Carolina. They also stopped EHS-infested boughs that entered the state from Virginia before they reached stores.

All the stores cooperated with the department, removing the items from their shelves and destroying them. However, many of the items had already been sold, and it is unknown if other chain or independent stores also received infested merchandise.

EHS has a complex life cycle, going through several growth stages. After hatching from eggs, "crawlers" begin feeding on the underside of needles and secrete a cover around themselves as they grow, creating the "scale" that is visible. The crawlers may establish new infestations. Wind and birds may also disperse infestations to new trees. EHS is very hard to control with pesticides, because it has overlapping generations with crawlers present all year long, and because the insects are protected by their hard, waxy coverings. EHS feeds on more than 40 conifer species, with hemlock, spruces and firs being among the most susceptible.

Need to know facts
Elongate hemlock scale (Fiorinia externa), or EHS, is an invasive pest introduced into the United States from Asia. It feeds on a wide variety of conifers besides hemlock, including fir and spruce. It damages trees by feeding on the undersides of their needles, sapping nutrients from the trees and weakening them. This makes them susceptible to other pests and diseases.
Where EHS Has Been Found
EHS has been detected in the District of Columbia, and the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Virginia.

EHS in Wisconsin

To date, EHS has not been found in Wisconsin's forests or Christmas tree fields. However, Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection inspectors have found it on cut Fraser and balsam fir Christmas trees and boughs, in wreaths and other evergreen decorations, and on hemlock nursery stock. All these items came from suppliers in states where it has already been established. In spring 2018, inspectors found infestations on hemlock nursery stock from Pennsylvania in two separate instances this spring. Later in the year, it was detected in wreaths, swags, boughs, and arrangements of evergreens in containers at several large chain stores. All had received their stock from four suppliers in North Carolina. Inspectors also intercepted infested boughs from Virginia at one outlet before they had entered the retail market.

The Risk in Wisconsin

Wisconsin is a major Christmas tree state. Christmas trees are an important product in state and for export, and choose-and-cut farms are important to the agro-tourism industry. EHS feeds on eastern hemlock, as well as fir and spruce, which are among the most valuable Christmas trees. EHS produces 1-2 generations a year, and each generation feeds during multiple life stages, unlike many other insect pests. The insects wrap themselves in a hard, waxy coating, which creates the distinctive "scale" visible on needles. Because of these characteristics, EHS is difficult and expensive to treat with pesticides.

In addition to the threat to Christmas tree fields, EHS also poses a risk to our native hemlock forests and other coniferous forests, as well as to ornamental evergreens in parks and yards.

Signs of EHS

Yellowing of needles on the interior of the lower branches; damage moves upward as population increases

Scale coverings on the underside of the needles

Premature needle drop; eventual branch and limb dieback and death of tree with severe infestations

Tree may appear flopped

Prevent EHS from Becoming Established in Wisconsin Consumers

If you bought evergreen wreaths, swags, bough, or arrangements at a chain store for the 2018 holidays, dispose of them at the end of the holiday season by burning or bagging them and putting them in your trash. Do not compost them or put them out for collection.

Businesses selling nursery stock and Christmas trees

Buy stock grown in Wisconsin or other states where EHS has not been found.

Let suppliers know that you will not accept stock infested with EHS or other pests.

Watch for any sign of EHS and report suspect EHS on trees to DATCP, using contact information in the box at right.

Dispose of known infested material by burning or landfilling.

DOLORES "DEE" M. SCHUPBACH

Dolores "Dee" M. Schupbach, age 69, of Brodhead, passed away on Sunday, December 23, 2018, at the Monroe Clinic Hospice Home, Monroe. She was born on April 15, 1949 in Monroe, the daughter of Gilbert and Ruth J. (Pinnow) Wendler. She married Ronald Schupbach on September 26, 1970.

Dolores was known and loved by everyone she came in contact with. She spent 25 years working at Sentry in Brodhead, greeting customers with a smile every day. When she left the grocery store, she took some time off to spend with Nancy and Sara. Most of it was probably spent listening to them argue, but it was one of the best summers of their childhood because they got to spend so much time with Mom.

Dee then took a job at Pinnow Pharmacy and spent the next 25 years building relationships with customers and coworkers. She would spend her hour-long lunch breaks eating with her own mom nearly every day.

Dee graduated from Brodhead High School in 1967. She loved spending time with family and friends. Every year she would spend a week in Hayward with Ron, the girls, Austen, and her grandsons. She enjoyed fishing, sitting by the campfire, taking the kids and grandkids to the beach and just being outside. Dee also loved going to Door County to spend time with her sister as well.

Grandma Dee attended everything she could for her grandsons, including two state track meets for Anthony and helping Elliot in his classroom in 4K last year. They were her pride and joy.

Dolores enjoyed bowling on Wednesday and Friday nights, a good cold beer, and lots of laughs. She had a great time going to the casino to play the slots (especially Jackpot Party) with her sister, friends, and broke daughters! She made it to Las Vegas more than once and loved every minute of it.

Dee spent many years taking care of everyone from her mom to her daughters to her grandsons. She was a rock for her family. Nancy is going to have to mow her own lawn now and Ron learned how to use the carpet cleaner for when Teddy (their dog) decided to pee on the carpet! If you knew Dee, you know how she was the master of cleaning!

Dolores is survived by her husband, Ron, Brodhead; two daughters, Nancy Schupbach, Brodhead, Sara (Austen) Williams, Cuba City; two grandsons, Anthony Zilliox and Elliot Williams; two sisters, Lorraine (Dan) Olson, Brodhead, Christine Wendler Anschutz, Egg Harbor, Wis.; a brother, Milt (Kathy) Wendler, Janesville; and two grandsons. She is preceded in death by her parents, a brother Marlan in 2007, and a brother-in-law, Steve Anschutz.

Per Dee's request, a Celebration of Life Visitation was held on Sunday, December 30, 2018 from 3 p.m. until 6 p.m. at the D.L. Newcomer Funeral Home, Brodhead. There were no funeral services. Online condolences may be made at www.dlnewcomerfuneralhome.com

Dolores fought this cancer with everything she had, never giving up. She will live on in our hearts forever, as the beautiful person she was.

A special thank you to Monroe Clinic Hospice for the excellent care.
