Apparent tornado in Milton, taken Sunday, May 26.

Tornado hits Milton area

On Sunday, May 26, at approximately 5:28 p.m., the Rock County Sheriff's Office responded to the Milton area for a report of a possible tornado that went through the area.

Cleanup continued the next day, Memorial Day, after the storm.

Indeed, the severe storms that blasted through southern Wisconsin on Sunday evening produced at least three tornadoes, according to the National Weather Service.

The first tornado was an EF-0 tornado that went along a track extending from west of Janesville – near northeast Footville – all the way through the community of Milton. The peak wind speed was approximately 80 mph. According to radar data, the funnel touched down at about 5 p.m. and remained on the ground for 22 minutes.

A tree was ripped up by the roots in Milton. It was one of many instances of tornado damage.

The National Weather Service storm survey found that a second EF-0 rated tornado, with an estimated wind speed of 65 mph, started over northeastern Lake Koshkonong and went 2.5 miles northeastward toward the southwestern side of Fort Atkinson.

Being not as strong, this tornado mostly caused downed tree limbs.

A third EF-0 rated tornado, with peak wind speeds of 80 mph, began east of Janesville and tracked to the north-northeast into Jefferson County, ending near U.S. Highway 12 between Fort Atkinson and Whitewater. The track was about 13.8 miles long.

The City of Milton Police Department responded to the tornado in their area. Law enforcement units located multiple downed trees and power lines. Multiple residences were found to have sustained structural damage.

There were no injuries reported.

Alliant Energy and We Energies responded to repair the downed power lines. The Rock County Highway Department, Milton Public Works, and Town of Koshkonong Public Works all responded to clear the roadways of the downed trees. The Lakeside Fire Department and Rock County Emergency Management responded as well.

The area was surveyed in the next few days by the National Weather Service.

Any additional information will be released by Rock County Emergency Management.

Blackhawk graduates 25 new recruits from law enforcement academy

Blackhawk Technical College held a special ceremony Friday, May 17 to recognize the efforts of 25 students who completed training through the college's Law Enforcement Recruit Academy.

This was the 92nd class to graduate from the academy, which provides the basic law enforcement training required to become a law enforcement officer in Wisconsin.

"If you put in the work, there's nothing more satisfying than doing this job right. When you help people, and they express their appreciation, there is no better reward," Troy Egger, Academy Director, said to the graduates.

Benjamin Casado, class speaker, said this academy class was comprised of leaders.

"One day we will be sitting in the crowd as seasoned law enforcement officers at a graduation welcoming in the new generation. I hope we all continue to get better because we will be their example, be their mentors and be their leaders," said Casado, who works for the Green County Sheriff's Office.

Lt. Richard LeFever received the Instructor of Excellence Award from the graduates, and Detective Jeff Winiarski of the Janesville Police Department was the keynote speaker. He teaches the defensive tactics class.

Three students also were recognized for four different awards of excellence:

About the Law Enforcement Basic Recruit Academy

Blackhawk's Law Enforcement Basic Recruit Academy prepares students for certification as law enforcement officers. Over the course of 720 instructional hours, recruits focus on the theories of law enforcement needed to be a sworn member of law enforcement in Wisconsin. In addition to the class instruction and hands-on practical exercises, recruits spend at least a half-hour of outside study time for every hour of class time. Upon completion, recruits are eligible for certification with the Wisconsin Department of Justice, Law Enforcement Training and Standards Board. Learn more at blackhawk.edu/recruitacademy.

Blackhawk celebrates GED, HSED graduates

In a ceremony at Blackhawk Technical College's Central Campus, 33 students graduated the evening of Tuesday, May 14 with their Certificate of General Education Development (GED) or their High School Equivalency Diploma (HSED).

Among the graduates, two individuals shared their personal journeys, marked with significant challenges and triumphs.

Morghan Carney promoted to Kandou client service manager

Kandou Industries Inc., a Rock County-based non-profit that provides programs and services to people with disabilities and disadvantages, recently announced that Morghan Carney has been promoted to client service manager.

Morghan Carney

In her new role, Carney will be responsible for the development and implementation of activities, procedures and protocols for the organization's prevocational employment and increased support programs.

Kandou's prevocational employment program provides employment training, supervision, and encouragement for adults with disabilities. Staff work with clients on everything from behavioral skills to social integration into the work environment. Clients are supported as they build confidence in completing assigned tasks, work to improve job skills, and earn a paycheck in a safe and controlled work environment. Kandou's increased support program (ISP) offers similar programming combined with daily living skills training for clients who require a higher level of support.

Carney will work jointly with Kandou's internal senior managers to provide supervision and leadership to a team of support staff while working directly with clients, guardians and families to develop individualized support plans.

Carney earned her promotion after serving as a client service coordinator for Kandou since July of 2023. Carney graduated from Iowa State University with a B.S. in psychology, is a child abuse and dependent adult mandatory reporter, and has completed extensive training in health, ethics, and civil rights.

Gov. Evers, DVA reveal veteran mental health grant recipients

Gov. Tony Evers, together with Wisconsin Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA) Secretary James Bond, announced recently that nine nonprofit Veterans Mental Health Community-Based Organization Grant funding to promote positive mental health through activities, programs, and services that enhance the emotional, psychological, and social well-being of Wisconsin veterans.

"From mental health and substance use disorders to challenges with housing and employment, we know that veterans often face unique hurdles when they return to civilian life," said Gov. Evers. "It's our duty to ensure that after their time of service, our veterans return to a state that values them and provides them with the support they need to thrive. I'm incredibly proud of the work we've done so far to invest in mental and behavioral health services for our veterans, and I'm grateful to our partners at DVA who do great work every day to support these heroes and their families."

The Veteran Mental Health Community-Based Organization Grants are part of Gov. Evers' $10 million investment in veterans services, which was funded through the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) and based on recommendations released by the Governor's Blue Ribbon Commission on Veteran Opportunity. In 2022, Gov. Evers signed an executive order creating the Commission to develop new, innovative initiatives to support the more than 300,000 veterans who live in Wisconsin. Based on the Commission's recommendations, Gov. Evers announced a $10 million investment, funded through ARPA, in veteran services across the state. These services included investments to support veterans' mental health initiatives, a new rental assistance program for homeless veterans, and additional resources for DVA's Veterans Outreach and Recovery Program (VORP), veteran services offices, and more.

Last September, Gov. Evers and DVA Secretary Bond announced nearly $650,000 in Veteran Mental Health Community-Based Grants to 16 nonprofit organizations. Gov. Evers also announced two additional veteran mental health grants for mental health providers to serve veterans with crisis or emergency mental health needs and for licensed providers to administer mental health services to veterans. In November, DVA announced $474,407 in grants to seven organizations for the first round of the two grant programs to directly subsidize mental healthcare for Wisconsin veterans.

Gov. Evers' 2023-25 executive budget built upon the investments recommended by the Commission, providing ongoing state support for these critical initiatives. While a majority of these provisions were removed by Republicans in the Wisconsin State Legislature, the final 2023-25 budget signed by Gov. Evers still increased funding by 25 percent for county veterans service offices and Tribal veterans service offices and provided $2.5 million annually to support the state's veterans homes, as needed, to ensure these vital facilities can retain staff, address building and operational needs, and provide top-quality care to veterans.

"I'm thrilled that WDVA is able to partner with this diverse group of nonprofits dedicated to serving veterans in their communities," said DVA Secretary Bond. "These organizations provide a holistic and thoughtful approach to veteran mental health. I am especially pleased that this round includes groups that specifically work with underserved communities. I'm grateful to Gov. Evers for this direct investment in Wisconsin veterans."

The nine grant recipients and their planned projects, totaling $600,000, are:

- Shield of Sisters received

$100,000 to fund a six-step "restoration" workshop that empowers women veterans who have experienced sexual trauma in the military.

- MKE Stables received $21,000 to fund an equine-assisted therapy program for veterans in Milwaukee.

- Next 18 received a $75,000 grant to expand their four-day camp model to provide the tools and techniques necessary for veterans to improve their mental and physical health by alleviating the symptoms associated with moral injury and post-traumatic stress disorder.

- BEAMING Inc. Equine-Assisted Services in Neenah received a $76,337 grant for mental health and therapy services through equine-assisted therapy programs. In addition, the funds will be used to help build bunkhouses for veterans and their families to stay in while attending services.

- Hmong American Center received a $100,000 grant to provide mental health programs to underserved Southeast Asian Wisconsin veterans by working with collaborative healthcare providers.

- Veterans Equine Alliance received a $43,000 grant to provide various individual and small group experiences through a non-riding equine therapy program.

- War Memorial Center received a $50,000 grant to provide programs and services to veterans and their families that focus on reducing veteran suicides and family support.

- Coulee Recovery Center received a $57,655 grant to provide holistic mental health services. The center will partner with the La Crosse Area Family YMCA's Wellness Warriors and other veteran and first responder support agencies across Wisconsin.

- Dogs2DogTags received a $77,008 grant to train and place service dogs with veterans diagnosed with post-traumatic stress or anxiety. There is no cost for veterans to receive a dog.

4-H volunteers impact youth mental health

By Deilee Calvert
UNIVERSITY OF
WISCONSIN-MADISON

Lisa Sprangers, a 4-H volunteer in Outagamie County, first met 4-H member Lily Schwartz when they served together on the Wisconsin 4-H Leadership Council. Sprangers remembers when they were initiated as co-presidents of the Council, "We were going up on stage and Lily looked at me and said, 'I don't know what am I doing.' I'm like, 'I don't know what we are doing either, but we'll figure it out together.'" When it comes to being a 4-H volunteer, Sprangers sees her role as one of support. "I'm the problem solver or the person that listens. I would equate it to coaching," Sprangers said.

Beginning 4-H at age 9, Schwartz, who is now a freshman at UW-Stout, has had a lot of experience with 4-H volunteers. "The adult volunteers through 4-H really boost my self-confidence and support me in a way that school and parents can't. Someone outside of your immediate family, having such faith and support in you and following through and wanting you to achieve your dreams. It's really good. It's really important," said Schwartz.

The soil of positive youth development

Having adult volunteers is more than a logistical or organizational solution. It's built into the 4-H Thriving Model. Caring adults from the community provide an important support system for youth. Research shows that having safe adults that youth can turn to, in addition to parents and guardians, helps youth gain a sense of belonging. And a sense of belonging is key to positive youth development.

Dawn Vandevort, 4-H Volunteer Development Specialist, uses the 4-H flower graphic to describe the Thriving Model, explaining that the flower grows best when it's in good soil. When the "soil" that surrounds youth provides a sense of belonging, they are more able to learn and grow. "Caring adults are really part of that. And making sure that our caring adults are prepared to help support and encourage young people, that's really critical for our young people to grow up and find their future and thrive," said Vandevort.

Vandevort's role in 4-H is providing support and training to adult volunteers so they have the tools they need to foster a sense of belonging and "spark" curiosity. Every 4-H volunteer goes through a series of trainings to better understand research-based best practices for working with youth and the roles and responsibilities of 4-H volunteers. Once they begin working with youth, volunteers are encouraged to identify additional resources or training needs that would help them succeed. Each volunteer has a county 4-H educator available to provide that training and connect them with local and statewide resources.

Supporting youth mental health

In the last several years, there has been an increase in volunteer requests for youth mental health support. Vandevort said, "We're seeing a lot more adults that are curious about how they can support young people. It's becoming more important to them and it's more visible. People are talking about it more, which is great. That's what we want is raising that awareness and visibility. That it's OK to talk about mental health."

In response, Extension's Behavioral Health team created training for 4-H volunteers, focused on helping adults know how to respond when youth come to them with big questions. Called "Supporting Youth Mental Health" (SYMH), the training gives volunteers tools and encourages adults to support youth as they think through the issue, rather than solving problems for them.

Heidi Groth, a 4-H volunteer first in LaCrosse County and now in Brown, said that as a 4-H leader she did not have a lot of situations where youth sought out mental health support, since meetings were short and focused. "Other than maybe basic conflict resolution where two kids want the same item, that's about the most I've ever dealt with at the club level," said Groth. Once she started to volunteer for extended experiences, like overnight trips, that changed. That's when she signed up for the SYMH training.

She is glad to have the additional training because SYMH prepared her for situations that she would not otherwise think about. During the training, she commented that some of the scenarios seemed very serious, more serious than she expected to encounter. "Emily [the trainer] said, 'Well, you never know. You're going to go on an experience. As the adult, you might have kind of a big question or a big event happen.'" Not too long after, Groth got one of those big questions from a youth in her group. Groth said, "I definitely appreciated the idea that you don't have to answer immediately. You can take a second to collect your thoughts."

Since then, Groth has had multiple opportunities to support youth with big questions and big events. She has guided youth through box breathing exercises to help with nerves before giving a speech and helped youth identify priorities when overwhelmed. Groth said, "I was glad the training emphasized the idea that different relationships are going to require a different level of need from you, and different youth are going to need different support depending on their age, depending on the circumstances; the idea that here are some specific tools in your toolbox. You, as an adult, need to choose the correct tool for the moment."

How adults are contributing

Caring adults are a big piece of the 4-H thriving model and they continue to show up for youth throughout Wisconsin. Last year, 4-H volunteers gave 293,000 hours of their time to youth. And those relationships are making an impact. "I work with volunteers across the whole state and it is amazing to see adults who truly care for the young people of our communities and support them and encourage them and spend their free time. They really, truly are investing their free time to make sure that our youth are prepared for their future," said Vandevort.

Groth has seen the impact firsthand in the youth that she supports. "There are things that are awkward to bring up with the adults that are very close in their life because they could be things that they're worried about how that adult is going to feel about that." Groth has had youth ask her to help them figure out how to respectfully talk to their parents about a tough situation. "They don't want to disappoint their parents, and their parents' expectations are a good thing. But at the same time, they realize and know this is not going to be what their parents want to hear." Groth said she often has youth ask her to be a sounding board so they don't sound disrespectful and rude to their parents.

Groth has also seen the impact of caring adults on her own family and herself as a parent. "My own experience growing up did not prepare me for parenthood. There's a whole lot of situations as a parent that I was not prepared for, and it's really nice that I don't have to feel like all of that's on me. My kids have somebody else to go to."

Lisa Sprangers, a 4-H volunteer in Outagamie County, and 4-H member Lily Schwartz work together on an activity.

Getting involved

Raising four kids and working full-time does not leave a lot of extra time for Groth to volunteer, but she has continued because it is so rewarding. "These things that you're excited about, youth are excited about them too, and they're experiencing them for the first time. So, it's like you get to relive it all over again. The best experiences of your life when you first discovered this new hobby or this new talent. You get to relive that moment again. So it's fantastic. I love that." Sprangers has been a 4-H volunteer for 17 years. Even though her kids are grown up and no longer in 4-H, she plans to continue volunteering. Sprangers said that she learns so much from the youth and the experience has helped her become a better communicator overall. "I think the words that come to mind is that it fills my bucket. There are so many positives of working alongside youth. Seeing and helping youth succeed, it just makes me feel good," said Sprangers.

While a lot of adults serve as 4-H community club leaders, clubs also need project leaders that can help youth learn specific project skills.

But, your contribution could be as simple as helping out as needed. Groth said, "The adults in 4-H need other adults, because I'm not an expert in everything, so I need somebody else to be there as the expert in things. And the youth need a variety of adults to do it. So even if you think your contribution isn't going to be super worthwhile, try anyway. Learn along with the kids, and you'll probably find that your experience is rewarding."

If you're interested in becoming a 4-H volunteer, contact your local county extension office to discuss options with your 4-H or Positive Youth Development Educator.

The University of Wisconsin-Whitewater was represented by 12 student-athletes at the 2024 NCAA Division III Outdoor Track and Field Championships last week.

The championship meet was Thursday to Saturday, May 23 to 25, at Doug Shaw Memorial Stadium in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The following UW-Whitewater student-athletes are outdoor national qualifiers for 2024:

Shelvin Garrett of Beloit, who is majoring in Physical Education.

Tina Shelton of Janesville, who is majoring in human performance.

Two Warhawk men qualified in two events. Christian Patzka (Black Earth, Wis./Wisconsin Heights) boasts the top times in Division III in the 5,000-meter run and 3000-meter steeplechase. Patzka defended his 2023 national title in the steeplechase. A three-time All-American in the event, Patzka entered the championship with the top time in Division III by more than six seconds. In the 5,000, he was joined by teammate Gunner Schlender (Brillion, Wis./Brillion), the ninth seed, in the event. Schlender also competed in the 10,000-meter run where he entered the championship with the 11th-fastest time in the nation this season. He captured bronze in the 10K a year ago.

Shelvin Garrett II (Beloit, Wis./Memorial) and Jordan Hall (Elkhorn, Wis./Elkhorn) both qualified in the triple jump. Garrett II entered as the number three seed while Hall is seeded 22nd. Garrett II is a two-time All-American in the event and was the 2023 runner-up at the national championship meet.

Justin Krause (Ionia, Wis./Pewaukee) looked to add to his 2022 All-America honor in the 1500 this season. He entered as the 12th seed.

Ben Bojar (Pewaukee, Wis./Pewaukee) earned a spot in the 100-meter dash with his time of 10.52 seconds, good for a tie for 20th among competitors entering the meet.

Tina Shelton (Janesville, Wis./Parker) led the UWW women as a qualifier in multiple events. Shelton's 100-meter dash time is tied for fourth-best in the nation this season. She also competed in the 200-meter dash where she entered as the 16th seed. Shelton claimed All-America honors in both events last season after finishing fifth and seventh respectively.

Shelton also ran the second leg on the Warhawks' 4x100 squad that comes in as the sixth seed. Hannah Bilodeau (Machesney Park, IL/Harlem) lead off the foursome followed by Shelton and Jacqueline Korowski (Green Bay, Wis./Preble). Danielle Pouska (Algonquin, IL/Jacobs) anchored the combination.

Gracie Holland (Marshfield, Wis./Marshfield) qualified in her signature event, the pole vault. She entered the championship as the fourth seed. Holland is a two-time All-American in the event. She finished as the runner-up in 2022 and was fourth a year ago. Kenni Czarniecki (Muskego, Wis./Muskego) represented UWW in the throws. She was the 11th seed in the hammer throw field.

Food writer celebrates state farmers' markets at June cookbook events

Terese Allen grew up in Wisconsin in a household of 12. "My family was into regional traditions like chicken booyah and Friday night fish fry, but we also got creative with ethnic and international foods. We all love to cook."

Terese Allen

Allen is now a renowned author of 14 cookbooks, a chronicler of Wisconsin's culinary traditions, a local foods advocate, and a former chef. She'll be promoting her newest book, "The Dane County Farmers' Market Cookbook: Local Foods, Global Flavors" at six events in June - in Madison, Milwaukee, Egg Harbor, and Baraboo.

"I wasn't surprised when Top Chef recently recognized the Dane County Farmers' Market as one of the best markets in the world," says Allen. "I've been shopping there - and at other Wisconsin markets - for decades. The variety and quality of food in this state are just unbelievable."

The Dane County Farmers' Market Cookbook: Local Foods, Global Flavors is a 258-page cookbook with recipes that features the bounty of Wisconsin small farmers from Antigo to Janesville, from Door County to Hudson. The dishes include some very Wisconsin recipes - cheese soups, strawberry-rhubarb bars - enticing global dishes from Laos, Moldova, Colombia, Libya, Japan, India and more, and wonderful culinary mash-ups, including jambalaya made with landjaeger sausage or osso buco made with farm-pastured bison meat.

Allen - called Wisconsin's "premier food writer" and "the keeper of our culinary heritage" - will be featured at these upcoming cookbook events:

- Saturday, June 1, 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Author signing with Terese Allen at the outdoor Dane County Farmers' Market at the top of State St. on the Capitol Square in Madison.

- Thursday, June 6, 6:30 p.m. Author Terese Allen in conversation with Milwaukee food writer Lori Fredrich; book signing to follow. Boswell Books in Milwaukee. Free event, but pre-registered.

- Sunday, June 9, 2 p.m. Historic Madison, Inc. presents "Madison's Iconic Food Cultures" with Terese Allen (on the Dane County Farmers' Market), baker Marie-Arzel Young (on the Morning Bun), and a speaker on cheesemaking and the Babcock butterfat test. At the Warner Park Community Center, in Madison.

- Tuesday, June 18, 4 p.m. Discussion with author Terese Allen and book signing, recipe samples. Door County Library, in Egg Harbor.

- Sunday, June 30, 10 a.m. to noon. Author signing and recipe samples with Terese Allen at the Bekah Kate's shop during Baraboo's

Adopt A Pot in Orfordville again

The Village of Orfordville will be doing the Adopt A Pot flower campaign again this year.

Fill out a form and return it to the Village of Orfordville at 303 E. Beloit St. before June 2 to participate. The form includes donation amount, whether it is cash or check, a sponsor name, and a contact person name with their phone number and email address.

This helps offset the cost of the flowers for downtown and at the local parks. Those that donate will be recognized on the Only in Orfordville Facebook page.

Electronic recycling drop off in Orfordville

Orfordville will have an Electronic Recycling Drop Off Event at the Village Hall on Thursday, May 30 from 5 to 7:30 p.m.

The dumpster will be at the Village Hall, back by the shed in the back parking lot. This is only available to residents of the Village of Orfordville as the Village has to pay for this event, which is funded by residents that live within the limits of the Village of Orfordville.

Please do not bring heavy appliances to the electronic pick up. Appliance pick up is part of the village's bulk pick up package the first Friday of the month. They are charged for the weight of the electronics that are dropped off, so not bringing in appliances will keep the cost down. There is no reason to bring appliances as they can be put on the curb at no cost.

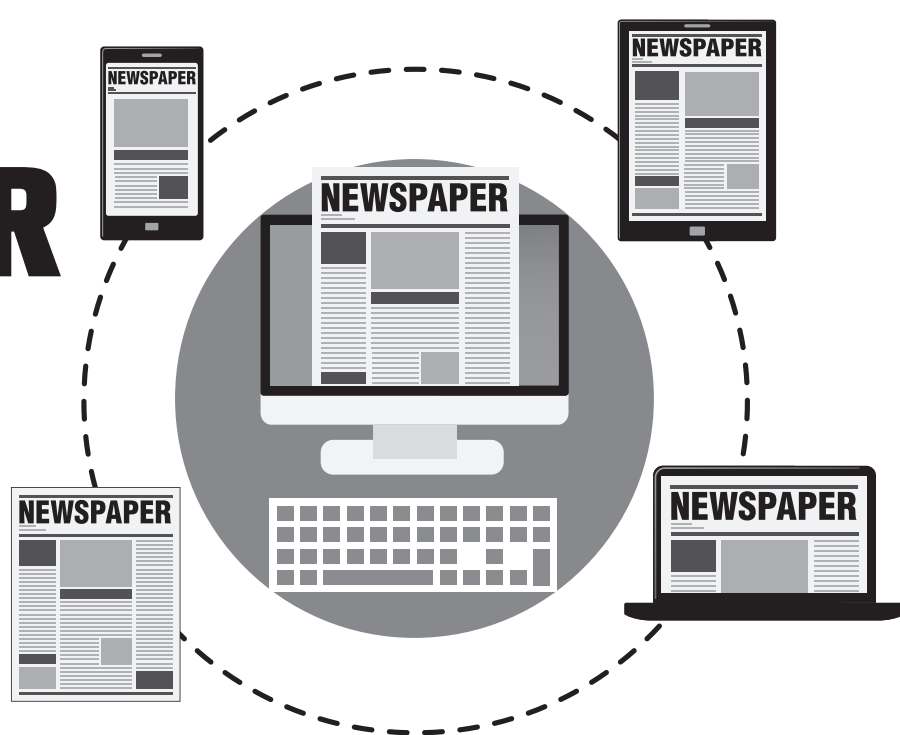

These electronic items can be recycled: computers including desktops, laptops, netbooks and notebooks; televisions and television monitors; cell phones, tablets and e-readers; fax machines, desktop printers including 3-D printers and printers combined with fax machines, scanners and copiers; battery-powered phone accessories; computer accessories including keyboards, mice, hard drives, scanners, speakers, flash drives and other devices; DVD players; VCRs; DVRs and other video players; video game consoles including hand-held video games and battery-powered accessories.
